Pensacola, Fla. ? Over the last 42 years, Pensacola used engine and recycling facility owner, Jim Butler of Butlers Auto Recycling, has seen what it takes to be successful in his business as well as his industry. Through quality leadership, he has built an exceptional team that provides outstanding service to his customers.

The company is constantly striving to be at the top tiers of their industry. Besides running his family-owned business, Jim Butler has held several different notable positions in his industry including President at the Florida Auto Dismantlers and Recyclers Association (FADRA) and positions in the Automotive Recyclers Association (ARA) making him well versed in all aspects of Milton auto parts.

Additionally, Butler's Auto Recycling has been previously recognized by the ARA as a Certified Automotive Recycler Gold Seal holder. This program guarantees excellent customer satisfaction with improved customer service, reliable deliveries, quality parts with accurate descriptions, and written product warranties and lets recyclers join forces to take a proactive stance to increase customer satisfaction and improve quality. Customers shopping with the used auto parts supplier can rest assured that they are receiving the best product for their investment.

The team at Butler's Auto Recycling in Milton, Florida is about more than just providing their customers with quality service and products. The company is on a mission to save the planet from unnecessary waste caused by the auto industry. The vehicles at Butler's Auto Recycling are 95% recycled the environmentally friendly way. If the vehicle itself cannot be reused, about 70% of it is reused for parts, 25% is recycled and only 5% is thrown out. The company collects cars either for cash or by charitable donation. Additionally, Butler's will receive any vehicle, functioning or not, and work with drivers to schedule a time to pick the vehicle up without any hidden towing or storage fees.
