?If you are in a hurry to sell a piece of property,? Chase Pays Cash notes, ?you will not want to spend months waiting for a buyer to make an offer, especially since there is still no guarantee that the sale will go through until the very last stages. If you have relied on the assistance of a realtor in the past, you may be under the impression that it is impossible to sell a house that does not have great ?curb appeal.? This may lead you to believe that you have no choice but to spend money you don?t have on refurbishing the house or even simply performing routine maintenance. Fortunately, the team at Chase Pays Cash is pleased to inform you that this does not have to be your only course of action.?

Chase Pays Cash has assessed and purchased homes in a wide variety of conditions, from those lacking a fresh coat of paint to those that may be considered unfit for human habitation. The company says they are always ready to check out a home and produce a free, no-obligation cash offer to the owner. This means anyone can call the company and ask for their best offer at no personal expense, and they are under no obligation to accept it. In fact, the company encourages sellers to take their time coming to a final decision. A sale can proceed almost entirely on the seller?s timetable.

The company adds that they are able to accommodate sellers with special needs, such as those who are actively residing on the property in question. While the ownership of a home may be about to change hands, the seller is welcome to continue living there until the sale is finalized. Chase Pays Cash typically does not need to examine a property more than once, and their offer will partially be based on the value of other homes in the immediate vicinity, (among other factors). In practice, they will not necessarily inconvenience or disrupt a home's current residents, which is often more likely when multiple potential buyers are expected to take a look.

This is not the only reason the company is considered one of the most convenient to work with. House sellers in Montgomery do not have to concern themselves with closing costs, realtor fees or any other supplementary expenses when Chase Pays Cash is on the job. The company handles everything on the seller?s behalf ? even the paperwork. According to the company, a seller only has to focus on whether or not they find the offer to be satisfactory. If they wish to continue with the sale, they only have to inform the company, and the money will typically be in their hands in no more than seven days.
