Las Vegas, NV business SMM Group, LLC have recently released their revolutionary oven mitts in new colors. Designed to keep people's hands safe, these mitts can be used for oven, stove or barbeque cooking. The mitts can even be used to protect a table from the heat from a hot pan. The product has been available in white and blue for some time on Amazon, where it has received many positive reviews. SMM Group has decided to also release it in various other colors, so people are better able to match the mitts to their personal taste and style.

"Not all oven mitts are created equally," says Mike from SMM Group, LLC. "While ours have always been of superior quality, we felt there was something missing. We believe that the missing element was the color of the mitts. Not everybody likes white and blue, after all. Hence, they are now also available in a range of other colors."

The mitts have been designed to be heat resistant up to 932 degrees Fahrenheit. They were originally manufactured by Grill Heat Aid, who designed them specifically for barbeques. However, it was quickly found that they are useful for all kinds of grilling and other types of cooking due to their extreme heat resistance.

The mitts are EN407 certified and are made of a thick, yet very lightweight material. Additionally, they are very flexible so they don't hamper any cooking actions.

Since initially having been released, the mitts have had highly positive reviews. "With most oven gloves and mitts, when you pick up something hot, you can still feel that heat through the material, and after a while, you need to put the item down somewhere," says Amazon Addict. "But with these grill gloves, every hint of heat was absorbed by the Nomex/Kevlar mix. I might as well have been holding something out of the fridge."

More information on the mitts is available both through the Amazon listing and the Grill Heat Aid website. The company also has an active Facebook page. People are encouraged to like this and join a community of people who have used the product in the past.
