

Austin Advanced Pain Institute Offering Conservative And Aggressive Low Back Pain Management

October 26, 2015

October 26, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Capitol Pain Institute, a clinic based in Austin, Texas, is offering conservative and aggressive pain management treatments to their patients. Founder, Dr. Matthew Schocket, has stated that their vast range of treatments have been implemented to ensure that every patient is able to get the right pain management for their specific needs.

"We need to match the type of treatment to how much pain you have, what you've done before, and your personality. If you are a very aggressive person then you're going to want a very aggressive treatment, if you are a very conservative person then you're going to want a very conservative treatment," he added.

Examples of conservative treatments would include physical therapy and occupational therapy, acupuncture or behavioral medicine treatment, which are all effective at helping people to cope with chronic pain. Other examples of conservative treatments could include various types of medication or supplements. Examples of more advanced treatments would include epidural steroid injections, radiofrequency treatment, joint, shoulder or knee injections and many others.

The clinic is in the forefront of pain technology. In 2014, it was chosen to conduct the first ever iOvera° treatment procedures in Austin. That advanced pain treatment uses the body's natural response to cold to immediately reduce pain without leaving anything behind. It precisely targets the source of your pain for immediate and lasting relief without the use of drugs or pharmaceuticals. The iOvera° treatment has been FDA cleared to block pain. The Austin advanced pain management clinic also specializes stem cells therapy as well as other progressive pain relief procedures.

Capitol Pain Institute also focuses on helping patients that suffer from low back pain, and the clinic also has a back pain relief blog to help people get more information on effective pain management. Dr. Matthew Schocket encourages all interested parties to visit the clinic's website in order to get more information on the types of treatments they provide. Here, patients will be able to interact with a model of the human body to precisely locate their pain. Capitol Pain Institute also provides a list of their pain doctors, and there is a section that goes into more details on some of the typical conditions such as arthritis, headaches, low back pain, spinal stenosis, disc herniation and fibromyalgia.

Interested parties who have further questions and would like to speak to the clinic directly by telephone or email are urged to go to the contact page of the company's website. The Austin Capitol Pain Institute stated that their goal is to provide their patients with the best treatments in pain management, regardless of the type of pain, personality and mindset of the patient.
