November 06, 2023

Atlanta, Georgia - November 06, 2023 -
Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C., a law firm based in Atlanta, GA, is offering the services of a medical malpractice lawyer in Atlanta and neighboring areas. It is important to note that it is not only doctors who can be sued for medical malpractice in Georgia. Any provider or person authorized by law to offer medical, dental, prescription, surgical, treatment, diagnosis, or other healthcare service may be liable for a medical malpractice claim. A medical malpractice claim may be filed within two years of the injury of death.

Chris Dietz, manager at Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C., says, ?When something goes seriously wrong after you have medical treatment, it is important that you speak to an Atlanta malpractice lawyer as soon after your injury as possible. The time to file your suit is limited. In Atlanta and throughout Georgia, the malpractice lawyers at Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. can immediately begin helping you to collect and preserve evidence so that you recover the compensation you need to pay for expenses such as your medical bills, lost wages, future treatment, and for your pain and suffering as well.?

They can help a patient bring actions against: nursing homes and staff, hospitals and staff, doctors, nurses, emergency clinics, walk-in clinics, technicians, specialists, surgeons, anesthesiologists, nursing aides, physical therapists, pharmacists, psychologists, chiropractors, and dentists.

Medical malpractice may be applicable to a broad variety of injuries such as: loss of vision, brain injuries, birth injuries, burn injuries,, spinal cord injuries, prescription or medication errors, defective drugs, cerebral palsy, peripheral nerve injury, blindness, stroke, hemorrhage, heart attack, life-threatening infection, vascular injury, obstetrics injury, bedsores (decubitus ulcer), MRSA (antibiotic-resistant infection), disfigurement, surgical error, misdiagnosis or failure to diagnose, fracture, death, and negligent post-operative care.

Chris Dietz explains, ?Medical malpractice law essentially determines the standards that doctors follow when they are taking care of their patients. Just like any other professionals, doctors need to perform their jobs at the best of their abilities. However, unlike other professionals, if doctors fail to perform to the standard or make mistakes, the outcomes can potentially ruin the lives of the patients.?

This is a popular area of law and is typically classified under personal injury law. Most types of injuries and accidents typically claim that one party was negligent, which resulted into the injury or harm. With medical malpractice cases, the patient has to show that the doctors generally have a duty of practicing medicine in a particular way, and the doctor had failed to fulfill or breached their duty of care, resulting in harm to the patient.

There are a number of factors that can be used to show medical negligence or malpractice. These include: a pre-existing doctor-patient relationship, which means there was an agreement between physician and patient; the physician?s actions were negligent; such negligence or malpractice had directly resulted into the injury; and the injury resulted into specific damages.

In Atlanta, examples of medical malpractice include the medical professional?s: failure to treat an illness in a timely manner, failure to diagnose a serious illness, failure to supervise an inexperienced healthcare staff, failure to supervise the patient, failure to provide the necessary medication, failure to administer anesthesia correctly, and failure to exercise precaution during a surgical procedure.

Started in 1989, Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. has a team of personal injury lawyers who can assist victims in receiving the compensation they are entitled to. Their lawyers have different racial and socio-economic backgrounds, are multilingual, and are recipients of various awards. They have also authored articles in various law school journals, such as the Georgia State Bar Journal. They are licensed to practice law in several states, including Alabama, North Carolina, Georgia, West Virginia, Florida, Tennessee, South Carolina, and Texas. They are encouraging those who have a possible personal injury case to request for a free initial case assessment.
