Derbyshire, England - January 17, 2024 - PRESSADVANTAGE -
Watertight Homes, a company based in Tingley, Wakefield, UK, takes pride in their comprehensive home preservation services, including damp proofing, basement conversions, timber preservation, commercial tanking, fixing of woodworm issues, and wet and dry rot control. The company?s survey technicians can offer various kinds of services, such as site inspection, reporting of findings, and providing estimates for any tasks they need to perform. Their skilled technicians will perform all of the damp proofing tasks and timber treatments, and they offer detailed reports on the work they provide.

A spokesperson for the company says, ?Watertight Homes Ltd is well known for the high quality standards and the professional approach taken by our technicians. We are committed to our customers and the level of service provided is unparalleled. We are members of the Construction Guarantee protection Services. We are independently checked for quality and training standards and health and safety practice. This means you can apply for a further optional insurance backed guarantee, covering the full 10 years.?

Damp proofing involves the control and elimination of moisture that has accumulated in the floors and walls in the interior of a home or building as a way to preserve the property. Their damp proofing experts have years of experience in fixing damp problems in a particular property. They have the knowledge and the skills to offer solutions for the four main kinds of damp that can cause serious damage to homes. These are: rising damp, condensation, penetrating damp, and underground water ingress.

Rising damp is typically the result of groundwater that is rising through capillaries in the masonry of a home or building. This is a common problem, especially in older buildings because new buildings are now constructed with damp-proof course (DPC). However, it is also important to note that rising damp may still occur in newer buildings as a result of a faulty or non-existent DPC. In such cases, a DPC will have to be installed to stop the rising damp.

Penetrating damp is the result of water getting into the building or property via an external wall. This is primarily due to water entering through a defect in the home or property or when the external stone walls or bricks have deteriorated over time such that they have become porous. This kind of damp is the most common cause of moisture inside a property.

Damp resulting from condensation happens when damp air in the home comes in contact with cold walls, mirrors, windows, etc. This kind of damp may also be found in the corner of rooms and behind and inside furniture. Poor ventilation in the home is frequently the cause of this kind of damp.

Established in 2000, Watertight Homes is a company based in Leeds, West Yorkshire that offers services for a variety of projects, big or small, including projects for architects, housing associations, local authorities, and private homeowners. They offer a wide variety of services, focusing on damp proofing, commercial tanking, dry rot and wet rot, basement conversion, cavity wall ties, woodworm treatment, and condensation treatment. They provide expert workmanship and promise to support clients at every step of the process, from consultation to the completion of the project. Their service area includes the city centre, Chapel Allerton, Horsforth, Headingley, Meanwood, Roundhay, Moortown, Guiseley, Alwoodley, Oakwood, and more.

The quality of their services is proven by the highly positive reviews the company has been receiving. For example, in a recent Watertight Homes review, Lewis B. gave them a five star rating and said, ?We had Watertight do some damp work and replace our brickties. I would highly recommend them for both, especially brickties as they gave a much better quote compared to others. Matt and his team were great at communicating, very friendly and professional. Watertight will be our go to guys for any future damp work we need.?
