Hot Water Woes in South Melbourne: Zebra Plumbing Helps Flat Owners Find The Price-Efficiency Sweet Spot

January 29, 2024

Hawthorn, Victoria - January 29, 2024 - PRESSADVANTAGE -
Zebra Plumbing, one of Melbourne?s most highly rated plumbing services providers, is offering recommendations for apartment owners looking for water heating solutions.

Winters in Melbourne average 10°C in July, its coldest month, and the city has been known to have days when the temperature dips below 0°C. For apartment dwellers, it is extremely important to have a hot water heating solution that is not only effective but also economical to install and run. Other challenges include limited installation space and rising energy prices.

The spokesperson for Zebra Plumbing says, ?Melbourne's apartment dwellers know the struggle: juggling limited space, rising costs, and the ever-present question, "Will we have enough hot water for showers?" Navigating the options for apartment water heating systems can feel like diving into a cold bath ? confusing and potentially expensive. But fear not, residents! Zebra Plumbing is here to shed light on the water heating conundrum and help you find the perfect balance between price and efficiency.?

The first decision flat owners must make is picking between an electric or gas water heater. While both have their pros and cons, it all comes down to the apartment owner?s setup budget and usage plan. Electric water heaters are often cheaper upfront but can get expensive with high energy bills, especially during peak demand. Gas water heaters offer faster heating and lower running costs, but installation and maintenance can be more expensive.

Next, apartment owners need to deliberate on whether they need a storage tank. Traditional tank-based water heaters provide constant heated water but take up space and can be wasteful. Instantaneous units are space-saving and energy-efficient but apartments might not always have the needed capacity to meet the demands of such a system. Finally, the last consideration that may or may not be in the apartment owner?s control is shared vs. individual systems. Central systems for the whole building can be cost-effective but individual units offer control and avoid reliance on others.

?If you already live in an apartment that has a central heating system,? the spokesperson says, ?you might not need to install your own. However, you might just need one to ensure you have hot water during peak usage times like mornings. Your needs will then be dictated by your occupancy, water usage habits, and budget constraints. Solo flat owners and couples can get away with installing an instantaneous unit but families may need to consider getting a water heater with a storage tank.?

Apart from analyzing their own needs, flat owners also need to assess whether their apartments are equipped to handle the installation of a water heater unit. This includes measuring the available space and examining whether there is adequate access to utilities for installation. For help with the technical aspects of water heater installation, Zebra Plumbing is always available to help apartment owners understand their options and find the best fit.

The spokesperson says, ?For eco-conscious budgeters, we recommend a heat pump water heater system that leverages air to heat water, cutting costs and emissions. For space-saving champions, consider getting compact instantaneous gas units for efficient heated water on demand. Contact us today for a consultation and let us help you find the perfect water heating solution for your Melbourne apartment. Together, we can say goodbye to lukewarm showers and hello to affordable, efficient hot water bliss that works for your situation!?
