July 12, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Most companies tend to get excited over the launch of a new website. Such is the case with Cub Roofing out of London, Ontario. They were very pleased with the way their new website turned out and they think their customers will be too. The information on the new website covers more areas than ever before and also does it in more detail. All of the roofing services have been fully explained and there are more site support features than the previous website version had too.

Bella Reynolds, a spokesperson for this London, Ontario based contractor, had this to say about the new website launch and why they chose to do it. She says, "When discussing our old website among us, we reached a consensus that we felt it needed a fresh look and different feel. We also wanted to better inform our customers about the different roofing services that we offer. A few of us also thought our customers needed more ways to interact with us through the website. Because of this, it was decided to also add more support features to the new website. So once in agreement, we all went to work helping our web design team bring the vision for our new website to life. We ended up being really happy with the final result because the new website turned out just as we hoped it would."

The newly launched website has a lot of information on the company's various roof repair London Ontario services. It mentions how their company does both commercial and residential roofing and how they never consider any roof repair job to be too big or too small for them to take on.

Their new website goes into detail about the many residential roofing services that they offer such as shingle replacements and entire roof replacements. One can also learn all about their metal roof panel options and the different residential roofing repairs that they perform. There is even information about clay, slate, and synthetic roofing tile options that they offer.

Among the other informational sections on the new website is the one that describes the commercial roofing services that the company does in London and the surrounding Ontario areas. The most popular of these commercial roofing services are the flat roof solutions that Cub Roofing offers. These include such flat roof coatings as Tar & Gravel Roof coatings and modified bitumen roof coatings. Cub Roofing also mentions on their new website the single ply membrane options for flat roofs that they can install.

There are several new support features on the improved website that customers will be able to take full advantage of too. For instance, if someone wants to ask a question about metal roofing panels, there is an easy to fill out form that will allow them to quickly get an answer back. On the main page, there is also a menu button that allows a customer to get a ballpark quote on any roofing services they are interested in getting done. Once the company receives these quote forms and reviews them, they will get back to the customer as fast as possible with a response. All of the drop-down menus on the newly launched website have been drastically improved too.

Acts such as redesigning their website are one of the characteristics that help keep Cub Roofing among the top roofing companies London Ontario. Whether it's through the quality of their roofing work or improved website launches, they always find a way to keep their customers interested in the large variety of roofing services that they offer.

Anyone who is interested in Cub roofing's services should pay a visit to their new website. It will answer many questions about any upcoming roofing project they need to get done. There is also a map on the new website that shows the company's approximate service area. If someone is unsure if they are in Cub Roofing's service area, they can simply use the contact number on the website homepage to call the office and find out.
