Fort Myers, Florida based Alchemy Digital Media has announced their latest home services directory. The new directory is a national directory for HVAC service providers throughout the United States. The company states that not only does the directory list contact information for heating and air conditioning providers, but it also provides reviews from different third-party websites so that consumers can check the reputations of the businesses before deciding whether or not to hire them.

The directory can be found at <https://www.hvacservicefinder.net>. Earl Gardner, a representative for Alchemy Digital Media says, "We wanted to do more than just list out HVAC service providers. A consumer who has never hired this type of work to be done before would have no idea of the types of businesses that they may be dealing with. Our goal is to not only offer a national directory where consumers can find HVAC providers, but to offer the reviews of those companies so that they can find the best HVAC providers in their area."

Gardner says that the directory is 100 percent free for consumers to use, and he adds that there are no third parties involved. When a consumer contacts a number that they find on the directory, they will speak directly with that heating and air conditioning company.

"We don't get involved past the listings," Gardner says. "Our goal is to simply give consumers the lists of companies that are local to them and then the consumer will take it from there as far as contacting those companies and hiring their HVAC specialist."

The new directory website also offers informative and helpful articles with tips on finding a reliable HVAC professional, how to choose a new HVAC unit, and many other helpful pieces of information. Gardner says that this is just another way that they are trying to help consumers to solve all of their HVAC issues.

The directory gives lists of local specialists based on a specific area that users will input. Results will not show whether or not a particular company is a member of the Air Conditioning Contractors of America, or any other HVAC body but Gardner says that this information can easily be obtained by visiting those websites.

"It's up to the consumer really, to do their research and check these companies out," he says. "Although the reviews from other sites are really helpful. If a company has a bad reputation because maybe they charge too much or they don't get the job done like it should be done, those reviews can be very helpful in weeding out companies that consumers would rather not deal with."

Gardner stresses that the directory is completely free of charge for consumers to use. He says that users simply have to type in the city and state that they are in and they will be given results that include numerous HVAC professionals in their local area. Users can also use the map on the website to choose their state and local area or search for professionals by the specific jobs that they do. The directory has categories for air conditioning repair, as well as heating repair, indoor air quality, heat pump installation, air conditioning installation, duct cleaning and various other categories.

Being an online directory, the new heating and air conditioning directory is available around the clock and lists the hours and days that HVAC specialists work. If a specific company offers emergency services, that information is provided so that consumers can get ahold of someone when they need them, no matter what time of the day or night it may be.

Those who are interested can now visit the new HVAC provider directory online and search for professionals in their local areas. The website offers more information about how the directory works, as well as an articles page that provides tips and advice for various aspects of heating and air conditioning unit maintenance, purchasing new units, installation and more.
