July 23, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Homeowners in San Antonio have to deal with a few unavoidable processes to sell their residential properties. A house has to be inspected. This is a precursory process, emphasized on by every real estate agent and buyer. The inspection should include price evaluation. This is an exercise that a homeowner must pay for. The subsequent step is staging. A house is not listed these days unless it is staged. This is not only true for old properties that look dated and hence could do with a bit of staging but also for relatively new houses. Staging makes a house more desirable in the photos and videos that are to be hosted along with the online listing.

The inspection, evaluation and staging are only the beginning. Every house must be advertised, agents often insist on reviewing the ask price, there may or may not be a sufficient number of buyers showing up to view the property and an acceptable closing offer may be elusive. A closing offer is often subject to an appraisal. The mortgage or home loan of a buyer is certainly subject to the appraisal and how the lender assesses it. The appraisal should be paid for by the homeowner in San Antonio. The advertising and other expenses along the way should also be accounted for by the seller. The whole process of selling houses in San Antonio and anywhere else in Texas for that matter is challenging. Despite enduring all the challenges, many homeowners do not get a closing offer even after three months of listing a property and hiring a realtor. Interested homeowners can read a recent press release they published.

Dependable Homebuyers, a real estate investment firm, is simplifying this entire process. It has effectively done away with the whole typical process of selling a house in San Antonio. The company puts forth a straightforward proposal. It inspects a house, for free. It ascertains the fair price and presents a closing offer. This purchase offer is for cash. There is no part payment. The entire quoted amount is payable at the time of closing. There is no intermediary and hence no commission to be paid by the seller. The closing cost of such a sale is usually paid for by the seller but in this case the company accounts for it. Homeowners can easily sell their residential properties in San Antonio to the We Buy Houses company and maximize the return they can secure.

Dependable Homebuyers, founded and owned by Evan Roberts, has not only managed to simplify the way people sell their houses in the city. The company has also succeeded in providing the quickest turnaround time. The company can schedule inspections in a day or two after receiving the first call. They can come up with purchase offers within twenty four hours of the inspection. They have the financial capacity and the intent to close deals immediately for those who want a quick sale. Dependable Homebuyers is able to close a sale within only seven business days.
