Perfectly Vivid, a company based in Coronado, CA, has announced that their tactical flashlight has been found to be a camping essential. They have recently started asking people to demonstrate the variety of ways in which they have been able to use the company's flashlight. They have noticed that they have received numerous reports from people stating that it is an essential tool to have while camping. Full details about the product are available through http://perfectlyvivid.com/.

Founder of Perfectly Vivid, Dr. Christopher Vogelmann, said: "We have received hundreds of responses to our question of how the flashlight is being used. One of the most popular responses is that it is an essential tool during camping expeditions. We're really happy to see that it has benefited so many people in that way."

The flashlight has been found to be perfect for night hiking and finding the way around the campsite. It has 100,000 hours of LED illumination, which means it can be used again and again. Furthermore, the flashlight is incredibly reliable and durable, yet very lightweight and small enough to carry in a standard pocket. This means that there are no issues about it being too bulky or otherwise in the way.

"We like to go wild camping," says Susan and Peter B. "This means that we often find ourselves in locations with absolutely zero light. It adds to the excitement, but having at least some illumination is appreciated. It makes us feel safer and it means we can find our way around. The Perfectly Vivid flashlight really is the perfect tool for that and we don't go camping without it anymore."

From the time that they have launched their campaign to ask people how they use the flashlight, the company has received a wealth of responses. These range from the flashlight being placed in survivalists' bug out bags to children having it in their bedroom, and from being the perfect mechanic's tool to being an excellent self-defense tool for people working in the dark. Those who have their own stories to share, or who simply want to find out what others have used the flashlight for, are encouraged to 'Like' the company's Facebook page on https://www.facebook.com/perfectlyvivid/?fref=ts.
