Lesson Plan Source is a company that provides a number of resources, tips and helpful products for educators around the world. The company recently announced a new tool that is available just in time for the back to school season.

Their story web graphic organizer can be seen at <https://lessonplansource.com/story-web-graphic-organizer/>. A representative for the company says, "Story webs are a great way to teach children and we wanted to help educators to find it easier to develop their story web."

The representative says that story webs or story maps are graphic organizers that can help to teach both reading and writing. Story webs help students to describe and better organize the elements of their stories; elements such as their characters, problems, and solutions. Story webs can also be used to help students to better organize their events into sequences of when they occurred, such as at the beginning of a story, in the middle or at the end. In other words, the graphic organizer can help students to organize and write the plot of the story.

The story web can help students to better organize their ideas before they write them down, so those ideas are better conveyed. This helps the student as well as the educator and the company says that the graphic organizer can be used to write on a number of topics and genres.

“Story webs can be used for just about anything,” says the company representative. “We have a template that can be used for reading or writing and in a number of topics. Our lined story web graphic organizer is great for organizing the title, setting and other elements of a story into landscape form. The blank story web graphic organizer will help students of higher grades as it gives more flexibility in what they add with regards to their story elements.”

The company says that these products are great for the new school year and can help students to get started back to school on the right foot. Many students struggle with organizing their thoughts, particularly during the first few weeks after a long summer break. The company says that their web story organizers help to keep students focused on their stories and help them to keep their thoughts organized.

The company was developed by a wife and educator who loves the learning process and wanted to help educators to better guide their students throughout the process. The website offers more information about these products and provides tips and ideas to parents and educators on a number of topics regarding education for children. The company says that they strive to offer a supportive resource for educators who are doing their best to teach their students in an underpaid and under-appreciated industry.

“Why should children suffer because of how difficult the teaching industry can be,” says the company spokesperson. “We hope to be able to provide a valuable resource to educators, like our web story graphic organizer, that will help them to better teach their students and maybe make the learning experience a bit easier and more enjoyable for those students.”

Those who are interested can visit the company on their official website to look through their various posts and products that are all geared toward helping professional educators to do their jobs a bit better. The company website has a list of their current products, as well as detailed explanations of their graphic organizers and other items that give educators a good idea of why these products can be useful in their classrooms. Direct contact information is also provided for those who have questions about any of the information that the site provides or educators who would like to speak directly with a company representative. The company states that their web story graphic organizer is not the only helpful tip that they have for educators for the new school year and that those who are interested can visit them online to find other back to school resources.
