Highlands, Nebraska - September 25, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

A Lincoln, Nebraska roofing contractor urges people to be proactive and get their roof and gutter cleaned this fall. The experts at Home Solutions of Nebraska state that this one simple step can avoid having to do extremely costly roof repairs in the spring from water ponding damage. Anytime water is not channeling of a roof properly it can lead to severe consequences.

Company spokesperson Justin Brandt talked about this further by saying, "The purpose of your roof and gutter and downspout systems is to direct water away from your roof. Anytime there is a restriction to water flow off your roof it can create problems. This happens when leaves, branches, and other debris collect on your roof or build up in your gutters and downspouts. Instead of flowing normally off of your roof, you now have areas where water may sit for a long period of time. This will eventually cause shingles to lose their ability to shed water and water backing up in gutters and downspouts will overflow and attack critical roof structure. A large majority of this can be prevented with a simple roof and gutter and downspout cleaning procedure."

There are several steps that are involved in fall roof and gutter cleaning that Brandt went on to talk about. He says that when a roofing company does this type of cleaning work they will actually send one or more roofing techs up on a roof. They will start by removing any large branches or tree limbs that have fallen on top of the roof. Once that is done, a roofing technician will then blow all of the remaining dry debris such as leaves off of the roof. After that is done their crews will turn their attention to the gutters and downspouts. They will remove all of the leaves and other debris that has accumulated inside the downspout and gutter troughs. Once this is complete they will completely spray out the gutters and downspouts to make sure water flows through them unimpeded.

He also emphasized that the job is never totally done because the roof, gutters, and downspouts are now debris free. That's because much of that debris that was on or in these roof water channeling systems is now on the customer's lawn. This will be cleaned up thoroughly before their well-trained crews ever leave the job site. They are a company that prides themselves on doing a complete roof, gutter, and downspout cleaning service from start to finish.

There is another big benefit to having these Roofers In Lincoln NE clean a customer's roof and gutter and downspout system too. While the crew is up there cleaning, a senior roofing technician will also thoroughly inspect the roof too. They will look for any damaged areas that may be present in the roof and look for signs that a roof covering may be nearing the end of its useful life too. Home Solutions of Nebraska will also check around chimneys and roof vents to make sure any leak preventing flashing is still in place and doing its job properly.
