Revolutionary Depression Treatments Now Available in Chicago

October 31, 2019

October 31, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

A new ketamine clinic has recently opened in Chicago, offering this revolutionary form of treatment to people who suffer from depression, anxiety, PTSD, and many other ailments. They believe that there may be people in the Chicago area who can benefit from ketamine treatments. Balance Ketamine Clinics, the new clinic, makes it their mission to make a difference in the lives of their clients, especially clients who are suffering from depression and anxiety. There are, in fact, many kinds of people that Balance Ketamine Clinics would like to help by offering their ketamine infusion services. Potential clients of Balance Ketamine Clinics include people who have clinical depression, those suffering from anxiety, including seasonal and general anxiety disorders, and anyone with PTSD who is still burdened by the effects of a traumatic experience. The clinic also offers consultations to people with chronic pain and fibromyalgia who would like their pain levels reduced.

Patients of Balance Ketamine Clinic can expect their infusion appointments to take under an hour. An individualized treatment plan will be developed at a consultation appointment before infusions start, and can be tweaked later on in the process depending on how the patient is doing. Treatment plans often involve six to eight ketamine infusions over the course of a month, and very few patients experience side effects from ketamine IV treatments. Some people may become slightly disoriented or be sensitive to light and sound, and the clinic takes precautions to ensure patients are safe during and after treatment and that any possible effects are mitigated as much as possible. This includes making sure that patients do not attempt to drive themselves home after treatment.

For people who hear about Ketamine therapy and wonder "how much does it cost?", Balance Ketamine Clinics has the answer. Appointments with Balance Ketamine Clinics cost $500, including all services. Ketamine infusions have not been approved by the FDA and are not covered by insurance, but Balance Ketamine Clinics still bills insurance for the attention of a doctor during the infusion process and the insertion of an IV for the infusion. As such, patients of Balance Ketamine Clinics are generally responsible for $200 per infusion, to cover the cost of the Ketamine. There are also other options available for other amounts of money depending on the needs of the patient, which may cost more or less than $200.

One of the services offered by Balance Ketamine Clinics is Ketamine Assisted Psychotherapy, which combines ketamine with the known benefits of a therapeutic relationship. Adding talk therapy to ketamine therapy gives patients the chance to think about their experiences with ketamine therapy, and process them in a healthy and supportive environment. Many life experiences can affect how people experience their lives, which can also be shaped by struggles with mental illnesses such as PTSD and depression. People who experience these kinds of challenges often seek the help of a psychotherapist to help them process and understand their lives. One way of doing this is through ketamine psychotherapy, which is offered by balance ketamine clinics.

Chicago's new Balance Ketamine Clinics promises to be affordable, because they want to help the millions of Americans who suffer from depression find a treatment that works for them. They offer Ketamine, which involves an IV infusion of Ketamine, which has often been used as a recreational drug and is also considered a safe anesthetic. Ketamine clinics are open to people who have severe depression that they have not been able to treat, and will work with their patients to determine if ketamine is an appropriate treatment for the individual patient, as well as what kind of treatment plan the individual patient should have. It's all very individualized. The process is easy and straightforward for interested patients, they just need to schedule an appointment. They will then have a consultation with a doctor, followed by a treatment plan being developed. Once all this has happened, infusions can begin.
