December 30, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Barnsley based pest control company Apex Pest Control is pleased to inform the community that they are continuing their efforts to free local properties from unwanted pests, helping combat the rise of cold-resistant insects that typically occurs during this time of year. They provide pest control services for both business and homeowners, helping them drive away all kinds of pests when required.

One of the advantages of the winter season that many fail to notice is the fact that most pests and insects are driven away due to the low temperatures and adverse conditions of the climate. Very few insects can survive in these conditions, giving homeowners a much-needed rest from the pests that lurk their houses during the rest of the year. Moths are one of the few pests that can survive and prosper during these seasons, however. They can reproduce and grow in large numbers to cause havoc at a later date, tormenting unwary homeowners who may have believed their houses were protected after the winter drove away most other insects.

Apex Pest Control explains that moths survive winter as caterpillars, remaining dormant until the spring season arrives, and they emerge as unwanted pests that roam their unsuspecting hosts' houses. Some types of moths may also spend the winter as pupae, sheltering from the cold under the soil to emerge later. This behaviour occurs so often that there is a type of moth native to England and Wales that is commonly referred to as the December Moth. These moths are attracted to light, and they are the type of moth most commonly found lurking in UK houses.

Tony Johnson, a representative of Apex Pest Control in Barnsley, states, "Even though you will not see any of these moths during this time of the year, taking caution and making preparations for the following months when they emerge is crucial. Stopping a pest infestation quickly is always the best course of action as it reduces the damage your property sustains, preserves your health, and even saves you money. Hiring a pest control company can save you a lot of hassle and inconvenience, especially with moth infestations, since they can be tackled even before they emerge from their cocoon."

Apex Pest Control states that their specialists are equipped to deal with any infestation promptly, eliminating any pests on their customers' properties and helping them regain the comfort of their house that was lost as the insects arrived. Their experts work throughout the city and suburbs of Barnsley and other neighbouring regions, providing a reliable, professional pest control service. The quality of these services is guaranteed, as all of the individuals working under the company are licensed and certified professionals. They are also members of the National Pest Technicians Association.

"Our knowledge, experience, and expertise allow us to provide the safest and most effective treatments to deal with pest control problems on your premises," states Johnson. He adds that all of Apex's pest treatments are child and pet-friendly, guaranteeing the safety and well-being of all parties that may inadvertently be exposed to the treatments used to drive the insects away.

The quality of Apex Pest Control's services is attested to in several of the company's customer reviews, and they enjoy a perfect review rating of 5/5 Stars on Google. A testimonial written by Viviane Ferraz, featured on the company's website, says that they demonstrated a, "Perfect combination of pest control knowledge and amazing customer service. Very professional with great attention to detail! Would recommend any time and will definitely use their services again if needed!"

Another review, written by Fiona Carpenter, says that Apex Pest Control delivered a, "Very efficient and professional service. I had a problem with mice in one of my rental properties and Tony dealt with the issue very quickly. One happy tenant! I would recommend Apex to anyone."
