March 16, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Phoenix, Arizona based Phoenix AC & Heating Experts is pleased to announce that they now offer air conditioning installation and repair services for both residential and commercial properties in Chandler, AZ. The company will be providing a wide variety of AC & Heating related services in the area that are aimed at helping homeowners and business owners keep their air conditioning systems running efficiently. Phoenix AC & Heating Experts in Chandler will bring all the knowledge, skill and experience that residents of Phoenix have come to rely on to keep their AC and heating systems functioning and offer it to the people of Chandler.

Investing money into home repair or a home project means finding and using the best services available if one wishes to have good results. Phoenix AC & Heating has been serving the valley since 2002 and has over a hundred years in the industry. As a factory authorized dealer and repair company, the company's employees hold themselves to the highest standards of service and strive to ensure that customers receive only the very best of their efforts.

One of the areas in which the company specializes is AC repair. Buying a new air conditioner requires thoughtful consideration if you want the unit to last for a long time," says the company. "It is important to acquaint yourself with various AC systems and be aware of the maintenance measures of each type, brand and specific model. Knowing your own unit inside and out will make it a lot more convenient to pinpoint what the problem might be if you need to have it repaired."

Even if one understands the inner workings of their AC unit, there is always the chance that they will run into a complex issue that requires the knowledge and experience of an expert to fix. Having been in the business since 2002, Phoenix AC & Heating has a lot of experience doing AC repair for residential and commercial systems. While one may be tempted to attempt a repair job by themselves and ignore the help that trained professionals are able to lend, it is usually better to get a qualified expert to do the job correctly the first time instead of trying to fix it alone and causing further damage.

The company also offers AC installation services. "Installing a new system is a job that is best suited for experienced service providers," says the company. "You want to make sure that everything is assembled in the proper order with the nuts and bolts all intact. Chandler AC & Heating Experts has the training and tools to install any manufacturer type of unit you want installed. Some of the best units that we work with are Trane and Carrier. All the technicians we work with and have on staff are fully licensed for both commercial and residential services. Furthermore, all techs go through continuous on-going training to stay up-to-date with the latest technology and advancements."

In order to keep one's AC system running efficiently, regular tune ups are a must, especially given the hot Arizona summers. One way to avoid being left with a malfunctioning AC during the summer months is to have maintenance performed on an AC system on a yearly basis.

"In the same manner that you go for a physical check-up each year, your HVAC system must also have regular tune-ups to guarantee that it will work properly when you need it to. AC tune-ups typically include thermostat calibration, condenser coil cleaning, assessment of refrigerant levels and examination for leaks. Technicians will also check the condition of the motor and blower belt and tighten all your unit's electrical parts," the company says.

A number of customers have left highly positive reviews of the company on multiple platforms. "Great service," one review on the company's own website says. "I think it's great they let you know who will be coming to your home and provide a picture as well. Kevin was very polite. He explained and showed me what the issue was and ran a complete check of my AC and heating system. Answered all my questions. Very pleased with Phoenix Air Conditioning!"
