Louisville based Integrated Pest Management Services, wants to alert people as to the significant threat to homes that termites present. That's why they are offering advice on how to spot these small but mighty home destroyers. Once spotted, then the homeowner can take steps to remove these pests from their home or call a skilled professional termite removal service like Integrated Pest Management to do it for them. This family-owned business has over 76 years' experience at eliminating termites and other common household pests.

Company spokesperson, Dennis Brewer, had this to say about getting a termite inspection done, "Termites aren't going to wait to invade your home or business, so you shouldn't wait to have a professional inspection done. As a trusted partner in both the residential and business community, IPM Services is here and ready to go to work for you."

Brewer went on to say that there are a few telltale signs that termites leave behind that will alert a homeowner to their presence. He says one of the most obvious signs that termites are present is the existence of mud tubes on foundation walls, exterior walls, wood beams, or in crawl spaces. Termites can also cause what looks like paint bubbling up on pieces of wood that sound hollow and feels soft when tapped. The company spokesperson says that darkening or blistering wood that appears for no apparent reason, or onsets very suddenly can also signal the presence of termites.

The spokesperson for this pest control Louisville, KY company says that many times a person can tell termites are present in a home because they can see them. Termites can be identified by their straight, beaded antennae on large heads, uniform waists, and wings of equal size. They are social insects that are known to live in big colonies in the ground or wood. A person may also see a pile of discarded wings laying near the other telltale signs mentioned above or detect the presence of termite feces which looks very similar to sawdust. He stated one big problem is many people mistake termites for ants so they are slow to react as far as doing anything about them. Brewer says this can be catastrophic to a home because of how aggressive termites are and the large number of materials they can eat through as they make their nests. The company spokesperson confirmed that termites have no problem chewing through such materials as wood, plaster, metal siding, flooring, wallpaper, and even roof structures. He says what makes things even worse is they often do this in complete silence with very few clues left behind. Sometimes only the well-trained eye of experienced pest inspectors like theirs can detect the presence of termites.

Integrated Pest Management Services can help people get rid of other pests besides just termites too. According to Brewer, they are also experts at eliminating ants, roaches, spiders, bed bugs, mosquitos, mice, wasps, bees, crickets, and millipedes. He says to help their customers reduce costs and to keep these unwanted pests from ever gaining a foothold on a property, they offer monthly, quarterly, and yearly service contracts on their services.

The company is very highly rated by those that have used their services. Here is an example of that in a 5 out of 5-star from Lindsay Goodman that says, "Best pest control company we have ever had. Never had one issue with anything they do, we actually look forward to seeing our pest control person every month. We never see bugs since we have used IPM, and they always say if we see anything between appointments give them a call and they will be right back out at no extra cost! Want a great pest control service you can count on for a really great price, then this is the place to call!!?"
