GERO, a small, family-owned business based in Colorado, has announced the sale of its Pro Second Amendment stickers on Amazon.com. The announcement was made on GERO's website.

The company's stickers support and promote the Second Amendment of the United States Constitution. The stickers come in various designs with different backgrounds, including several flags of different states (Texas, Missouri, North Dakota, Alabama, South Dakota, Louisiana, Michigan, and Colorado), as well as the Confederate and Gadsden flags, and an Army/Camo design.

Company representative Walter wanted the stickers to speak up in behalf of the Second Amendment's supporters. "We at GERO wanted the Second Amendment's supporters to have a voice, and we believe that our product contributes a lot in making that happen. We believe that firearms have been the best form of protection for businesses and homes, and we are passionate about keeping our constitutional rights as you are," he mentioned in a previous interview. "Our community can use our stickers to show support as armed, law-abiding citizens, and hopefully inspire others to consider our beliefs."

The stickers can be put on vehicles as car window decals, and almost anywhere as a form of self-expression. GERO wants people to express the worth of their constitutional rights and encourage safety from unconstitutional control. Through its stickers, the company invites the community to show their love for their country and state. One great benefit of displaying the sticker is deterring every criminal activity, as a result of the sticker's message.

The company wants the Second Amendment's supporters to have a greater pride when it comes to their country and state through its stickers. "As a proud American, I am more than willing to put a GERO sticker outside my home," Aaron Hadler, a Louisiana native, said. "The sticker speaks for itself, and is an obvious sign of my potential carry?it's a great benefit and advantage to have to steer me and my family clear of crime and potential danger."

GERO's stickers come in a high-quality, 4x6 clear laminate. The laminate makes the stickers waterproof. As of this writing, the stickers can be purchased on Amazon.com.
