Chem-Dry of Park City is a carpeting pet odor removal specialist. Their experience tells them that if a pet accident is not cleaned from carpeting right away, there is a good chance that a foul odor will continue to linger in that room for a long time to come. They say that it's hard for hand cleaning or ordinary carpet cleaning machines to reach deep enough into the carpeting to be effective. That's why they recommend quick professional pet urine cleaning using sophisticated products like their PURT urine treatments.

Company proprietor, Daryl Olsen, had this to say on the matter, "Without a doubt, one of the worst things that can happen to carpet is to have a pet urinate on it. That's because a pet tends to release enough urine to saturate a pretty good area of the carpet. Often it even reaches deep into the carpet fiber and foam backing. This makes it almost impossible for normal cleaning methods to remove all of the pet urine. That not only can leave a stain in the carpeting but it can also create an extremely foul odor that makes it hard to stay in the room. This is why it's best to call a professional carpet cleaner right away if your pet has urinated on your carpet or upholstery. Professional carpet cleaners use special formulas such as our pet urine removal treatment (PURT) to clean deep down in carpet and padding. That way no lingering pet odor is detected in the air after the cleaning process has been completed.? PURT pet accident treatments are described in more detail here at <https://carpetcleaningparkcityutah.com/our-services/pet-urine-removal-treatment.html>.

Olsen went on to say that the odor left behind after a pet accident is caused by a combination of bacteria and hydrophilic salt crystals. He says hydrophilic salt crystals often occur after uncleaned urine in carpeting starts to dry and these salt crystals naturally attract moisture. Once these salt crystals are remoisturized, they then release the nasty smelling ammonia gas that makes people cringe and find it hard to stay in a room. The company proprietor says this odor can become extremely bad in homes that do not have dehumidifiers. Olsen mentioned that there are other concerns with pet accidents too. This includes the unsightly stains that are left behind and the damage to carpet fibers that can happen when slightly acidic urine reacts with them. He emphasized the need for quick action when it comes to thoroughly cleaning up pet urine because the longer it stays in carpeting the harder it is to get the smell out and prevent staining.

The company proprietor also went on to talk about the PURT pet cleaning formula that they use to eliminate pet odors. Olsen says that most pet urine cleaning products typically only mask urine odor for a short period of time. That is not the case with PURT. He says it's a special formula that attacks pet urine on a molecular level and breaks it down into harmless byproducts. Once the urine has been destroyed on a molecular level it no longer can produce an odor. He says that they also use a special UV light to identify exactly where the urine has embedded itself in the carpeting. Olsen says that PURT even has been somewhat successful when it comes to reversing the damage caused by older pet stains that were not properly taken care of initially.

The company is well known for its other cleaning services too. Olsen says this includes their patented Chem-Dry carpet cleaning service that is unique because of the way it uses carbonation to thoroughly clean carpet and allow it to dry faster. He says this same treatment works well on upholstery and area rugs too. Other services the company offers include tile & grout cleaning and granite countertop and water damage restoration.
