Freida Peters from VitaVersa says: "We are overwhelmed with the popularity of our product and want to encourage more people to give it a try. This is why we have launched a flash sale for one week only, offering the cutting board and serving tray set at a 55% discount. Customers are encouraged to get theirs fast, because they are literally flying off the shelves!"

The cutting board has also proven to be popular as a wedding gift. As such, those who have already purchased the board may consider buying a second set for gift-giving. Thanksgiving and Christmas are both only just around the corner as well, after all. Considering the number of positive reviews that the product has received, it seems that this may just become one of the bestselling Christmas gifts this season. The reviews can be seen at

"These bamboo cutting boards are very durable and are eco friendly, the large board has a metal ring so I can hang it on a hook on my wall by my counter," says NanaLisa70. "The boards are natural with anti microbial properties and they are made to absorb less liquid. These bamboo cutting boards are a perfect addition to my kitchen and will be used for many food prepping meals and holiday cooking. Having great cutting boards helps to minimize cross contamination as one cutting board can be used for cutting meat and the other for prepping vegetables, fruit or breads or other food."

VitaVersa is also proud of the fact that they have received a number of private messages from renowned chefs who have used the boards. They have all stated that they wholeheartedly recommend the boards to not just their friends and family members, but also their colleagues in the food service industry.
