Hale County, Ala. ? All eyes have been on bail reform around the country, including the eyes of a local?bail bonds company, Alabama Bail Bonds. During the recent election, attention in the bail bond community was on California, as voters in that state voted Proposition 25. California voters ultimately rejected the proposition, which would have abolished California?s cash bail system entirely.?

If proposition 25 had passed, it would have replaced the requirement of bail money as a condition for being released from jail while awaiting trial. The intent of the proposition was for the release of inmates to be at the discretion of judges throughout the state, allowing them to decide based on public safety and the flight risk of the defendant.

Members of the bail industry have been on high alert as many around the country are pushing for bail reform, claiming the system creates greater hardships for the poor. Those opposed to bail reform argue that placing the power in the hand of a judge may lead to racial discrimination along with other downfalls. Either way, the financial stakes are high for the bail industry, as there are new regulations on the horizon that seek to appease both sides.?
