January 06, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

PermaKill Exterminating Co., LLC is pleased to announce that they are offering squirrel control services in Flanders and surrounding areas. While squirrels appear to be harmless, they can actually cause great harm to the home and the family's health if they are left unchecked. These rodents can chew on electrical wires, destroy insulation, and create unsightly entrance holes around eaves. Furthermore, squirrels can spread certain diseases, such as leptospirosis, salmonellosis, and tick-borne illnesses, resulting in various health issues ranging from fevers to nerve pain to rashes and more.

Just like other rodents, such as rats and mice, squirrels tend to look for warmer places during winter, which means they will find a home an attractive place to stay in because of the warmth and available food. Their favorite places in the home are the attic and walls. They may also be attracted to a bird feeder that is found in the garden.

While some homeowners may want to allow squirrels to stay in their home for the winter, it is important to know that the longer they stay in the home, the more toxins are accumulated, which can negatively affect the health of family members. These toxins are released from the urine or feces of squirrels, not to mention the bad odor that such things can produce. In addition, dead squirrels can cause a smell that can permeate the house for a long time. Furthermore, squirrels may carry fleas that can attach themselves to pet dogs and cats. And the mites and ticks that they carry can also cause disease in people, such as Lyme disease, encephalitis, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, and more. PermaKill Exterminating can help avoid such problems. More information about the pest control company can be gleaned by following their Facebook page.

Frank Illnick, owner of PermaKill Exterminating, says, "We offer professional exterminator services with a pest control team and a number of methods to handle squirrel removal. The removal method we use will depend on the specific condition of the squirrel infestation in your home. Usually, this will involve trapping and exterminating or relocating the squirrels. We may also use specially-designed animal control squirrel repellent for your home and garden, including lighting equipment capable of repelling the squirrel infestation."

Squirrel removal can actually be a challenging process because of the tendency of squirrels to hide in walls, the attic, crawl spaces, and chimneys. This makes it difficult to trap squirrels and remove them with just a single treatment. That is why PermaKill Exterminating is offering an animal control warranty for up to 90 days after the treatment that is performed during the summer or spring, or until the end of March, for a treatment performed during fall or winter.

Whether the infestation is caused by a gray squirrel or any other type of squirrel, it is vital to have them removed as early as possible. Homeowners can look for signs of squirrel infestation, such as unique bad smells around the home that can be due to the urine of squirrels and even dead squirrels. Acorn deposits in the attic, roof, and gutters can also indicate the presence of squirrels. And there could be ruffled or damaged insulation in the walls and attic, combined with the presence of sticks and leaves. The presence of squirrels can also be detected by sound as they tend to make unique scuttering noises in the roof and walls during the early morning or late afternoon.

PermaKill Exterminating is a locally owned and operated family business that was founded in 1984. Their focus is on offering scientifically proven treatments and because they are not a franchise, they can customize the treatment to fit the customer's specific needs.
