Tallahassee, Fla. - Mr. Rooter Plumbing of Tallahassee is no stranger to the impacts natural disasters can have on communities. As a result, the Tallahassee plumbing company is highlighting the growing demand for plumbers in the aftermath of the devastation which recently happened in Texas. Partnering with American Standard, both Water Mission and Plumbers Without Borders are calling on plumbers to help with the overwhelming need in Texas following the destructive winter storm.

Over one million Texas residents were left without drinking water by the unprecedented arctic storm. As a state that does not normally see these types of temperatures, the pipes froze, which caused extensive damage to the water distribution system within the state. The main objective of plumbers in the entire state is to deliver clean water to vulnerable residents who need it the most.

American Standard is helping to cover both the food and housing cost for plumbers who are volunteering to come to help the state recover from the disaster. Plumbers Without Borders and Water Mission invite plumbers across the nation to participate in their campaign to provide water access to the state by volunteering at Plumbers Without Borders' website: <https://www.plumberswithoutborders.org/volunteer>.

As a nonprofit Christian engineering organization, Water Mission builds safe water, hygiene solutions, and sanitation in natural disaster areas and developing nations. As a leader in its field of housing and building materials, products, and services, American Standard is a world leader in water technology. Plumbers Without Borders helps organize volunteer plumbers to assist organizations working toward safe water and sanitation.
