123Employee, a business headquartered in Las Vegas, NV, has announced that their work is making a meaningful difference to impoverished communities in the Philippines. Although their headquarters are located in Las Vegas, their virtual offices are found in the Philippines, from where they employ only local people to deliver their services. In so doing, they offer these communities not just an opportunity to work, but also to be educated.

"We guarantee that all our virtual assistants speak perfect English without an accent," says LJ Gacho from 123Employee. "This means that we first have to train our employees to become fully bilingual, a skill that will serve them well for the rest of their lives. We are so proud to be able to offer services to companies who need virtual assistants, while helping to improve the world at the same time."

Some 27% of the people in the Philippines live in extreme poverty. Additionally, it is believed that this number is increasing. Some reasons for this poverty include rapid population growth, wide income inequality, and a high inflation rate. An issue of particular concern, as well, is the high rate of unemployment. Any efforts made towards improving this situation are greatly appreciated. Most charitable organizations involved in the Philippines focus on addressing specific consequences of poverty, such as poor access to water. 123Employee, however, is one of the few organizations that focus specifically on employment and education.

"One of the particular issues the Philippines is facing is that many of their workers are unskilled," adds Daven Michaels, founder of 123Employee. "This issue is particularly important among women, who experience higher rates of unemployment and greater lack of education."

The company is highly respected for their virtual assistant services. They work with companies all over the world who require their services at various points during the day at different time zones. They are known for their excellent work and the virtual assistants are known for their friendliness and professionalism. The company is sure that the quality of their employees' English skills is acceptable. Thus, those who are deciding whether or not to hire them are provided with a way to hear them speak in English.
