

Adfilic Announces Upgrades To Popular Expandable Water Hose

September 28, 2015

September 28, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

British Columbia based company Adfilic has announced an upgrade to their popular expandable water hose. The company states that after receiving feedback from their customers throughout the summer months, they have developed an updated version of the hose.

"We have incorporated a great upgrade to our expandable hose by adding in a more robust and durable inner tube," states company spokesperson James Chien. "Our customers spoke, and we listened, providing them with the exact hose that they wanted."

The upgraded inner tube has been designed to help control water flow so that it doesn't damage the fabric of the hose and cause leaks. James Chien explained that it will also now expand and shrink faster than before, which allows for better portability.

"We took into account all suggestions for improvement of our collapsible garden hose," states James Chien. "We strive to provide our customers with the best of the best, and these upgrades we feel will allow us to do just that." He goes on to say that they have upgraded the hose, which now has a much higher quality than its previous version, although most customers were perfectly satisfied with the original. In order to provide the highest quality of products, the company has pointed out that it often upgrades customer favorites, and that the garden hose was very well received on the marketplace since its original launch.

The company has noted that they have received various questions about the hose, including customers asking them "what is the best garden hose," and they wanted customers to know that they are offering an upgraded version of the heavy duty garden hose, to ensure quality.

James Chien points out that they often take into consideration feedback received from customers about all of their products, and work to ensure that they offer the quality that their customers have come to expect from the company in general. The newly upgraded expandable garden hose can now be purchased through Amazon.

Adfilic provides a number of consumer products for home and garden on the Amazon marketplace. More about them, including a list of the products that they currently have available, can be seen on their Amazon seller's page.
