Petrelli Law, P.C., a law firm in Philadelphia, PA, has launched a brand new website in partnership with Attorney Erik Vogel to offer free case reviews for bike accidents in the Philadelphia area. The Philadelphia bike lawyers in the firm have observed an increase in bike usage and accidents in Philadelphia, which is due in part, to the new bike sharing programs that are in place.

"More and more people in Philadelphia are starting to use bikes," says Thomas Petrelli, Jr. from Petrelli Law. "While this is commendable and understandable, it brings risks with it as well. Unfortunately, the majority of bike accidents happen because of the carelessness of drivers and this must be addressed."

Many cyclists fear they cannot be compensated if they are involved in a bike accident with a vehicle. This is why the law firm is ready to take on any cases and help people get the compensation they deserve. Common causes of accidents include drivers being distracted, drivers cutting in front of cyclists, and drivers exiting driveways without looking. In all of these cases, the driver is at fault. The firm offers a free consultation to anyone who has been involved in such an accident and wants to know whether they could be compensated.

Many bike accidents are not overly serious. Most cyclists only experience minor bleeding and manageable pain. However, there are instances where the victim is left permanently disabled, requiring expensive medical care for life. The Philadelphia bike lawyers want to help these people receive cover for their medical expenses and costs, and are compensated for their trauma and its emotional impact as well.

"Exceptional job," says one previous client from Delaware County, PA. "He was able to settle the matter before trial so that it wasn't as painful as I thought it would be. Not only is he a good lawyer but he turned out to be a good friend in the end as well. He treated me like family the entire time. Thank you so much!"

Petrelli Law encourages anyone who has been involved in a bike accident to contact them for a free, no-obligation consultation.
