November 11, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Arnesen Webb, P.A., a law firm in Boca Raton, FL, is now offering assistance to homeowners with collecting their water damage insurance claims. After some research, they found that people often don't know what they are and are not covered for, and that insurance companies use many tricks to minimize the money that they actually pay out. As insurance lawyers, Arnesen Webb P.A. wants to make sure people actually get the compensation they deserve.

"Most home insurance policies include cover for water damage, ranging from toilet leaks to damages caused by flood," says Jay Arnesen from Arnesen Webb, P.A. "However, many people aren't aware of this and end up fixing the damage themselves. Not just that, but those who do contact insurance companies often find that they are being poorly treated, simply because the insurance company wants to pay as little as possible."

Flood damage is particularly important to fix as soon as possible. If left unattended, it has the potential to cause further damage to the property over time. Yet, it seems that insurance companies are doing all they can to stall and avoid doing the repairs themselves. In fact, they often only offer temporary repairs, while telling the home owners that the issue has been completely resolved. This has the potential to lead to more problems later on.

Arnesen Webb P.A. is there to help people assess whether or not they have a claim to be made and, if they do, how to best present this claim to the insurance company. They do not charge any fees until the money has been recovered from the insurance company. This means that people have nothing to lose by at least giving them a try. As property damage lawyers with years of experience in insurance claims and insurance disputes, the company is ideally positioned to help those who have experienced water damage.

"Nobody wants to live in a home that has been damaged by water," adds Jay Arnesen. "But too many people find themselves with no alternative, simply because the insurance companies are being resistant. We encourage them to contact us today to have their issues resolved."
