Calgary, Alberta based Alberta Indoor Comfort (Company) is pleased to announce that they are new featured member of Ductless Directory. Alberta Indoor Comfort (previously Sears) is a full-service HVAC contractor that provides engineered heating, cooling, and indoor air quality solutions to the residents of greater Calgary area communities.

Ductless air-conditioners and heat pumps, extensively used globally, are the fastest growing HVAC technology in the world due to their endless applications, delivering the perfect temperature in any room of your home or office; many Albertans have already experienced ductless cooling when they travelled to warm destinations during their winter getaways.

Company is proud to be acknowledged by the Ductless Directory, an internationally acclaimed consumer resource which educates consumers on the importance of hiring the right ductless air conditioning contractor. Alberta Indoor Comfort was selected by Ductless Directory as a result of the company's ability to set themselves apart from average contractors with their deep expertise and knowledge in the design, installation and repairing of Ductless Systems.

Mike Berezowski, Chief Healthy Homes for Health Expert and Engineer at Alberta Indoor Comfort, says, "We're experts in Ductless Mini Split Installation. We have deep knowledge that translates into increased home comfort. In order to take advantage of everything a ductless system has to offer, you have to understand that end results start with a proper design. There are a lot of hacks out there, many contractors that view it as just throwing it in a box ? but it's so much more than that. The knowledge and credibility we bring is designed to help homeowners enjoy increased comfort for years to come and protect their home from damage."

As the company explains, there is a lot of work that needs to go into ductless systems. Before a system is even installed, there are a number of steps and precautions to take that will have an impact on the customer's level of comfort and satisfaction. To that end, Alberta Indoor Comfort maintains a team of HVAC experts who are factory-trained by the manufacturers and bring deep knowledge to the table.

Alberta Indoor Comfort uses trained professionals that understand all the components, not just the refrigeration. They deeply know the codes, know where to drill to not damage structural or building envelope integrity, where and how to hang it, how to comply to building and HOA constraints, electrical code requirements, and more. Service Experts are vendor-trained, and the company avoids relying on hires who simply picked up the trade along the way. This is in contrast to some other contractors who do not even know how to properly do penetrations in a building, and this is crucial given that small mistakes can still lead to big consequences when it comes to HVAC installations.

The ductless heat pump is transforming the way people heat and cool their home in Calgary. Our credibility and commitment to the consumer is second to none. It's why I [Carla] am part of the boards of directors of the regional Better Business Bureau and a long-serving Low-Income Housing for Seniors housing complex board. We believe that comfort should be in the reach of everyone," says Carla Berezowski, the VP of Sales at Alberta Indoor Comfort. In addition to Carla being on the board of the Better Business Bureau, the company also boasts the distinction of being a Google Certified Contractor which requires in-depth background validation. Further, Alberta Indoor Comfort is also licensed by Service Alberta, Energy Efficiency Alberta, and is a Certified Aging In Place Specialist helping seniors remain independent in their homes through accessibility focused renovations.

Carla and Mike Berezowski share, "We refocused our 26 year old company with the goal of becoming the best ductless heat pump and air conditioner installation company in Calgary. For us, it's a labor of love. Consumers get peace of mind, because when they work with us, they get our technical expertise backed up by our commitment and customer support. When you do business with us, we make you comfortable from the first time you call on us to your final installation and long-term maintenance."

As a company, Alberta Indoor Comfort is dedicated to helping their customers at every step. They provide 24/7 support and consumer guides to help interested parties compare them to other contractors. The company is even willing to go the extra step and help get condo and homeowner association approvals. Company also works with multiple payment financing partners to allow all desiring clients to achieve their deserving comfort.

Alberta Indoor Comfort Team's commitment to their clients has earned them rave reviews. Jan Peterson writes in their 5-Star Google review, "Terrence and James arrived promptly to replace our very old furnace. They were very knowledgeable about the product and installation process. They worked diligently and professionally and answered all of the questions we had. They left the furnace room as clean as they found.

We highly recommend them. Thank you to both of you.?
