SoftBreath, a business in New Orleans, LA, is proud to announce that their popular running socks have now also been released in white. The overall material or shape has been left unchanged with the new white socks. The running socks can be seen at <http://www.amazon.com/dp/B018RGXP6E>.

"Our running socks have long been very popular," says Patrick Shawn from SoftBreath. "We are committed to customer service and we listen to what people have to say. One of the things people were saying to us was that not everybody wanted to wear black socks. We have listened and have released them in white as well now."

The socks are made from 86% cotton, 10% polyester, 3% spandex, and 1% elastic. They have been designed to keep runners comfortable in particular. They use 'soft breath' technology, which means they provide both comfort and support. The material is highly breathable, which implies that even those who sweat more profusely than others should find their socks dry and comfortable.

Furthermore, the socks have been designed to stay soft and smooth, giving a cushion feel to the feet, even after they have been used for a few weeks and have been washed regularly. In fact, many people have stated that they have never worn any socks as comfortable as these. "I love these socks," says one happy customer, "super comfy and soft. The socks are lightweight and thin which are good for running. Although thin, the socks are of very high-quality and durable. They are made of a soft and very breathable material, so my feet never once felt hot or sweaty in them. The high, padded tab on the back of the socks that provides extra cushion between the back of the ankle and socks and the padded tab protects against potential blisters/shoe burns. It makes it much easier to grip the socks to pull them up."

While the socks have been designed for running and will remain comfortable if someone were to run a marathon in the rain, they can equally be worn as regular socks. Now that they are available in white as well, they can match with many different types of outfits. Meanwhile, the company is encouraging everyone to give them a 'Like' on Facebook at <https://www.facebook.com/softbreathbrand> to be kept up to date with future developments.
