Career Extenders, a business in Naples, FL, has announced that their massage therapy tools have been extensively reviewed by many people, including Paul St. John, who is a true authority on the subject. St. John says, "These ingenious devices are remarkable in their design and application, miraculous in my opinion.?" The testimonial by St. John, who is the founder of Neuromuscular Therapy, lends credibility to the efficacy and benefits of the tools provided by Career Extenders.

"We want you to learn how to extend your massage therapy career with Career Extenders massage therapy tools," points out Merrill Lund from Career Extenders. "The tools I have designed have been shown to be incredibly beneficial, and I really can't thank Paul St. John enough for his favorable review."

The above-mentioned massage therapy tools are designed to take the stress of giving a massage off of the hands, fingers, and body of the massage therapist, while at the same time allowing the therapist to give the client far superior results than when working directly with the hands, fingers, forearms, elbows, or massage therapy tools designed by other companies. Paul St. John's explains the use, benefits, and features of Career Extenders massage therapy tools for massage therapists in a YouTube review. Others have left similar positive reviews and testimonials about the neuromuscular therapy tools.

"Dear Career Extenders," says J. Parker. "You have to be the nicest person on the planet. I use the thumb tool on occasion, but I use the L-Bar consistently. My colleagues have since visited your website, since we are all "mature" therapists trying to get in the last ten years."

A former skeptic, Cas Sayles, of the United Kingdom, says, "Wow, I've always been so anti-tools, preferring to feel the changes and reactions in the tissue until my thumb decided enough was enough. I was looking at having to give up the career I love. I did some research and came across the website. I decided to give these tools a go and am completely transformed. I've been using the tools for a few days and love them. The feel is incredible and I'm getting incredible results."

The various testimonials on the company's website support the claims that Paul St. John makes as well. Merrill Lund has also won an inventor's award from the Edison Inventors Association for his work in designing tools that make massage therapists work easier, safer, and much more effective in getting life changing results for their clients, including when offering trigger point therapy.

The company has also released an overview video of how to use Career Extenders massage therapy tools. This 'how to' video has proven to be incredibly beneficial to professional therapists. It has already received thousands of views and massage therapists have called it 'career changing'. Designed to aid therapists of all disciplines, medical doctors, chiropractors, pain relief specialists, and athletes, the massage therapy tools for massage therapists are quickly becoming a bestselling item.
