Spexhair, the online hair loss mentor whose real name is Spencer Stevenson, helped add helpful advice on what works and what does not work when it comes to successfully treating male pattern baldness by giving his expertise live on RTE radio.

The interview was live on air on the 2FM show on radio station RTE2. Interviewed by Jenny Greene and Nicky Byrne, Spencer answered common misconceptions and gave a breakdown of what works in a proven context vs unproven treatments.

When asked by Jenny Greene on the radio interview about the costs associated and the types of treatment outcomes Spencer had the following to say: "The real secret to hair loss success stories are those individuals who prevent further loss along with how much commitment you wish to make to dedicating preventing hair loss with proven medical treatments."

When referring to prevention it is through proven medications which inhibit the attack on the hair follicles by a substance known as DHT(Dihydrotestosterone) which eventually cause the hair follicles to miniaturize and fall out.

Stevenson believes the interview will be welcomed by avid listeners who like to download and share podcast style media, as the interview is available to listen to on the SoundCloud platform, making hair loss knowledge more accessible through not just video and blog post and press articles but also a very consumable medium that people can access on their way to work or whenever they have spare time. Those who are interested can listen to the spexhair interview on sound cloud under the RTE2fm handle.
