?Addressing addiction treatment is more than just therapy. At Clean Recovery Centers, we are dedicated to learning about you and helping you identify your strengths. Utilizing a unique, three-phase approach to addiction treatment, our dedicated staff is able to address all aspects of addiction and mental health concerns. The Bradenton location focuses on phase one, called preparation,? an article from the website states.

The preparation phase features a medical detox, supervised 24/7 with emotional support. Detoxing from substances like alcohol and opioids can be dangerous and uncomfortable. The staff at Clean Recovery Centers not only provides physical treatment to manage withdrawal symptoms but also daily therapy to cope with any mental and emotional stresses.

The next step of the preparation phase is a residential I stay. Considered inpatient treatment, the residential I program typically lasts 3-4 weeks. Clients will stay onsite in our community housing and meals are provided.

Daily therapy and skill-building classes are a key part of the structured schedule in this program. Wellness components are also introduced during this time and can include yoga, nutritional counseling, massage therapy, brain mapping, and therapeutic exercising.

Providing quality addiction treatment often includes mental health. Our team is capable of diagnosing any mental health condition during any phase of treatment. We use this diagnosis to determine the next step in treatment throughout the Clean Recovery Centers facilities. The mental health treatment path will guide you by providing education about the condition and giving you a safe space to heal. Our dedicated team of professionals will help with medication management and daily therapy to develop healthy coping skills, the article continues.

When it comes to addiction treatment, it is key to know every client is different. Clean Recovery Centers embraces individuality and reflects it in treatment. No two stories are the same, and their program can adapt to fit each client's specific needs. Some things to expect from the Bradenton location are a family-like environment, trusted and knowledgeable staff members, continued support from Clean Recovery Centers, even after treatment is completed, housing that is certified by the Florida Association of Recovery Residences (FARR), and a safe place to heal and focus.

Bradenton is a Florida city on the Manatee River, south of Tampa. The South Florida Museum has natural and cultural history exhibits. It also encompasses the Bishop Planetarium and Parker Manatee Aquarium. The nearby Riverwalk park stretches along the water. Galleries, studios, and shops occupy colorfully restored 1920s and '30s cottages in the Village of the Arts.

Clean Recovery Centers has been providing their services throughout the Suncoast and continues to expand within the communities. Paired with their three-phase approach, each facility has a certified rapid-resolution therapist on site, including the newest Bradenton facility. Trauma is an integral part of addiction causes, and this therapy specifically targets past situations and works to resolve them. If a client is diagnosed with a mental health condition, this becomes the focal point of their treatment path. Co-occurring disorders are seen far too often in substance use disorders, and Clean Recovery Centers takes pride in being able to provide treatment in both areas.
