iFOAM of Northeast Atlanta offers local homeowners and businesses a full range of spray foam insulation services to increase their property's energy efficiency and reduce their monthly power expenditure. For more information, visit web site.

Spray foam insulation stands out as a no-brainer home improvement project for homeowners looking for the highest return on investment. With a high R-value, when compared to other insulation products, its insulation capabilities surpass those of other popular alternatives such as fiberglass and organic insulation.

Spray foam starts as a liquid when it is kept under high pressure and expands upon exposure to air. It fills all the gaps within a home's exterior walls to establish an impermeable seal that aids in alleviating seasonal allergies and inhibiting mold proliferation.

"By utilizing spray foam insulation," says Chris Cox of iFOAM of Northeast Atlanta, "homeowners can enhance their energy efficiency by a remarkable 30%. This translates to substantial savings on your long-term energy bills. Moreover, beyond its superior heat retention properties, spray foam insulation also boasts an exceptional ability to combat air infiltration, leading to better indoor air quality.?

The costs of spray foam installation fluctuate based on a property?s size and the homeowner?s specific requirements. Insulating an entire house can take several days whereas a crew focused on working solely on the attic can be done within a couple of hours. Partnering with an established contractor, such as iFOAM of Northeast Atlanta, and its experienced installers, guarantees a smooth installation process from start to finish.

iFOAM of Northeast Atlanta is owned and operated by Chris and Caroline Cox who bring years of entrepreneurship experience to the table. Before iFOAM, Chris co-founded iVitaFi, a FinTech company providing hospital patients with 0% financing. Before that, he advised Beazer Homes on land acquisitions. He is assisted by General Manager Adam Hollander who is a proud graduate of The Ohio State University and boasts nearly three decades of experience in the home improvement and construction industry.

When asked about why he chose to work with iFOAM for his next venture, Chris says, ?We moved to Atlanta in 2016. While the metropolis offers all the conveniences of urban living, pockets in the city and its suburbs still retain the charm that is characteristic of small individual communities. There is a strong bond among the city?s residents that is hard to explain. With iFOAM, I have a chance to serve this thriving community with a world-class product that others in the industry can?t match. It enthralls me that my work here is making the lives of the hard-working folks in Atlanta better. For more information, visit company website.?
