Anaheim, California - The Lighthouse Treatment Center, a premier drug and alcohol addiction treatment center in Anaheim, California, proudly participated in the Anaheim Resource Fair, an event that brought together community organizations, local government representatives, and residents to promote a healthier, more informed community.

The fair, held at Stoddard Park on October 5, 2024, was organized by District 67 Assemblywoman Sharon Quirk-Silva and District 2 Anaheim Council Member Carlos Leon. This free, family-friendly event featured a variety of booths offering essential services, information, and resources to local residents.

The Lighthouse Treatment Center's participation highlighted its commitment to spreading awareness about addiction recovery and mental health services. As a leading provider of addiction treatment, the Lighthouse Treatment Center is dedicated to educating the community about the importance of recovery and the resources available to those in need.

significance of their involvement.

"Participating in the Anaheim Resource Fair was an incredible opportunity for us to connect directly with the community. Our goal was to provide valuable information about addiction recovery and to dispel myths surrounding it. We engaged with numerous attendees, sharing our knowledge and resources, and it was inspiring to see the community's openness and eagerness to learn. Providing information on addiction recovery is essential because it can transform lives and empower individuals to seek help and support," Jimenez stated.

Resource events like the Anaheim Resource Fair play a crucial role in connecting community members with vital resources. These events offer an invaluable platform for organizations to share information, provide direct services, and engage with the public. Attendees at the Anaheim Resource Fair had access to free food boxes, health services, and a wealth of local community resources designed to support and enhance their quality of life.

Peter Davidson, President of the Lighthouse Treatment Center, highlighted the importance of such community events.

"Community events like the Anaheim Resource Fair are integral in developing a sense of unity and support. At the Lighthouse Treatment Center, we believe in the power of community to drive change and create positive outcomes. These events allow us to reach individuals who may not otherwise have access to the resources they need, and they provide a space for us to work collaboratively with other organizations to address critical issues like addiction," said Davidson.

Anthony Monroy, Field Representative for Assemblywoman Sharon Quirk-Silva, expressed gratitude for the participation of organizations like the Lighthouse Treatment Center.

"The success of the Anaheim Resource Fair is a testament to the dedication of our community partners. The presence and contributions of our partners were key in making the event a tremendous success. The Anaheim Resource Fair provided a valuable opportunity to connect our community with essential services and resources, and we couldn't have done it without our partners. Whether it was sharing important information, offering direct services, or simply engaging with attendees, the commitment to our community was deeply appreciated by all. Events like these are so much more impactful when dedicated partners join us," said Monroy.

The Lighthouse Treatment Center's presence at the Anaheim Resource Fair not only helped to educate attendees but also contributed to strengthening community bonds, creating a lasting impact on the efforts to support and uplift residents. The participation in the event also exemplified its dedication to being a proactive community partner, committed to spreading awareness and providing support for those affected by addiction.
