London, UK, JAN 22, 2016 ? London landlords letting space want to make sure that their space is comfortable for their tenants-to-be. In order to help London residents, LB Plumbing and Heating (www.lbplumbingandheating.com) has just published a new blog post authored by Ray le Blanc entitled 'Boiler Installation by North London Experts: Comfort and Efficiency.'

The article discusses how 'when one feels that the past winter is too much for a residence?s boiler, it's time to let a company like LB Plumbing and Heating solve the problem with a North London boiler installation.'

?It may be ?tempting? to hold on to the unit if it still appears reparable,? says Amy Andrews, writing for the Daily Mail?s This is Money section. ?But you never know when it?s going to clunk out.?

The article discusses how 'a full inspection of the residence?s boiler system is paramount to ensure it is still in top condition, (more or less). Andrews notes that one must check if the boiler unit is still under warranty, as this will mean the manufacturer is obliged to provide the necessary repairs free-of-charge. A look at the unit?s heat exchanger is also advised, as changes in temperature may have compromised its shell, rendering it vulnerable to carbon monoxide leakage.'

?Change is never easy, especially when it comes to a vital home system such as the boilers for a house or flat you're letting out,? Ray relates. ?On the bright side, though, a new boiler installed through a company such as LB Plumbing and Heating assures you of a powerful, more energy-efficient system to make yourself or your tenants comfortable when cold weather sets in.?

LB Plumbing and Heating under Ray Le Blanc has been in business for several years. They offers free quotes with no obligation or a hard sell. They work within North London, U.K., including Kensal Green, Cricklewood, Hampstead, Muswell Hill, Willesden, Stanmore and the surrounding areas.
