Zero Pest & Pest Control, a business in Minyama, Queensland, Australia, has noticed a significant increase in the number of people that have requested their pest control services to deal with ant infestations. To ensure people are better able to protect their homes, they have released new information to help people avoid ant infestations in the first place. Additionally, they now offer a completely free ant inspection service.

Mick Kinnear from Zero Pest & Pest Control says: "Because it is an El Nino year, the weather has been off this year. The result of this is that ant colonies have grown exponentially. When a colony grows to a size that is no longer sustainable, some ants will leave and start new colonies. Unfortunately, this is often in people's homes. While we can certainly help them get rid of these ants, we really want to help people avoid the situation in the first place."

Ant infestations can be very significant, as well as destructive to properties. It is for this reason that people need to be careful about foods that they leave out, and even about how they get rid of it. This is particularly true for sugary foods, including those with natural sugars such as honey. Various tips have been released by Zero Pest & Pest Control to help people think about the everyday behavior they may need to change in order to avoid ants.

Those who have had to call in the ant pest control company have been overwhelmingly positive about their experience. "My husband and I have used Mick with Zero Termite & Pest quite a few times in our properties over the last few years," say the Lindsay. "Mick has always been reliable, showed up on time, and explained everything very clearly to us. Mick has a passion for 'pest busting' and I feel comfortable knowing that I have someone in the local area who I trust to get the job done. I would not hesitate to recommend Mick at Zero Termite & Pest."

The company offers both residential and commercial pest control services and they encourage anyone with a pest problem to contact them as soon as possible.
