August 12, 2026 -

STM Trucks & Machinery supplies Fuso and Iveco truck models across light, medium, and heavy-duty classifications as an authorised dealer for both manufacturers. The family-owned dealership serves commercial transportation requirements for businesses throughout New South Wales from three locations.

The range covers Fuso's commercial vehicle lineup, from compact delivery trucks to heavy-duty models, alongside Iveco's range of commercial vehicles built for varied applications. STM's three locations in Smeaton Grange, Queanbeyan West, and Unanderra provide access to these model ranges, supported by the company's service infrastructure. Operators can evaluate multiple vehicle options within the same brand family.

Duty-class coverage across the range reflects demand from commercial customers seeking single-source arrangements for fleet requirements. The range allows businesses to source vehicles from urban delivery applications through to long-haul transportation through a single authorised dealer network. Model lineups spanning duty classes suit growing businesses that require different vehicle specifications as their operations change.

"Our customers ask for truck lineups that handle their operational requirements," said a spokesperson for STM Trucks & Machinery. "Carrying Fuso and Iveco across all duty classes means we can put a customer in the right vehicle and back it with our own service department. Customers build a relationship with one dealer instead of managing several vendors."

The vehicle range is supported by STM's service infrastructure, which includes workshop facilities equipped for vehicles up to B-Double specifications. The company's service operations extend beyond standard maintenance to include 24/7 emergency support and on-site repair services for commercial fleet operators. Customers purchasing vehicles across different duty classes receive the same support regardless of vehicle requirements.

STM Trucks & Machinery maintains a spare parts inventory for both Fuso and Iveco vehicles, with deliveries running twice daily across Metropolitan Sydney and each afternoon to the Southern Highlands and Wollongong. The parts operation supports the vehicle range with genuine manufacturer components and aftermarket alternatives. The company's parts department stocks components across all duty classifications, so maintenance and repair requirements can be addressed regardless of vehicle size or application.

"Operators need vehicles that match the work, whether that's urban delivery or heavy-haul operations," the spokesperson added. "Carrying both Fuso and Iveco means customers find what suits them inside brand families they already know. Sourcing multiple vehicle types from one dealer also simplifies warranty management, service scheduling, and parts procurement."

The company's workshop operations support the vehicle range with factory-trained technicians working across both Fuso and Iveco systems. Its service capabilities include routine maintenance, major repairs, and specialised diagnostics for commercial vehicles across all weight classifications. That technical coverage runs from light-duty urban delivery vehicles through to heavy-duty long-haul applications.

STM Trucks & Machinery is the authorised dealer for multiple commercial vehicle manufacturers. Commercial customers can access the Fuso and Iveco range through STM's three locations, with sales and service support available six days per week. Customer facilities include four courtesy vehicles, rest facilities, and a waiting area. Each location handles both sales and service.
