

Dancina Expands Into Learning With Reusable Cursive Workbook

August 13, 2026

MIAMI, FL - August 13, 2026 -

Dancina has expanded into educational tools with the Magic Grooved Cursive Handwriting Workbook, the first featured resource in its new Dancina Learning category. Developed under founder Andrea Schiffer's teaching-led approach, the reusable workbook provides children, teenagers, and adults with guided practice for school-style cursive letter forms and connections.

Dancina Learning introduces an educational-products category focused on practical learning tools. Its initial offering centers on cursive handwriting practice through a reusable workbook with grooved tracing lines, disappearing ink, a pen, and supporting reference materials. The format is intended for children learning cursive forms, teenagers developing handwriting skills, and adults refreshing their practice.

The Magic Grooved Cursive Handwriting Workbook is designed around real school-style letter shapes and connections. Its tracing lines guide the pen while allowing learners to repeat exercises. Because the ink disappears, the same pages can be used for ongoing practice rather than treated as one-time attempts. The product page identifies the workbook as reusable writing practice with a magic pen and disappearing ink, and describes it as suitable for ages 8-12 and beginners of any age.

The set includes a grooved cursive handwriting workbook, a pen with disappearing "magic" ink, school-style letter forms and connections, a cursive reference poster, and a zipper storage bag. The materials give learners a central practice resource alongside a visual reference and a way to store the set between sessions.

Andrea Schiffer is identified in the supplied editorial material as a six-time world dance champion who began teaching children while she was still a student. Her work as a teacher and educational author informs the move into Dancina Learning. The category applies a teaching-led focus to handwriting practice through demonstration, repetition, and guided steps.

Customer feedback shared with Dancina describes family-wide use of the workbook. One parent said the resource was purchased to supplement handwriting practice for teenagers and remarked that a spouse working in the medical field could also benefit from using it. Another reviewer with professional calligraphy experience described the workbook as a useful refresher and reported completing six pages in one sitting.

A separate reviewer described the grooves as "just enough to follow along" rather than overly deep. That feedback also noted that users can move outside the guide. The comments present the workbook as a practice aid rather than a requirement for immediate perfection, while individual experiences may differ.

Dancina Learning also makes free downloadable worksheets and wall charts available as supporting handwriting materials. The free cursive handwriting worksheets provide practice pages covering uppercase and lowercase letters from A to Z, with letter models, stroke direction guides, dotted tracing rows, and lines for independent writing.

The category gives Dancina a two-part identity centered on instruction and repeatable practice. Dancina Learning begins with cursive handwriting and includes the Magic Grooved Cursive Handwriting Workbook as its featured resource. Information about the brand is available through the Dancina website.

"Dance and handwriting may look like two different worlds, but both are learned through clear guidance and meaningful practice. Dancina is now one brand in two worlds—dance and learning—because every skill worth having deserves to be taught right," said Andrea Schiffer, Founder.
