August 13, 2026 -

Custom window treatment manufacturer Shutter Masters has expanded its Maryville, Tennessee production facility, increasing its regional manufacturing capacity for interior window coverings by 25 percent. The operational expansion allows the company to process higher volumes of custom order specifications for residential and commercial properties across Blount and Knox counties. Under the updated production schedule, Shutter Masters will produce custom-built interior shutters engineered specifically to individual window frame dimensions. The full business name, Shutter Masters, continues to operate from its central facility in Maryville, where all wood and composite components undergo local assembly and quality inspection prior to installation. Company management reports that the expanded facility footprint aims to reduce order turnaround times for clients seeking plantation shutters in Knoxville, TN, while maintaining standard fabrication protocols.

Custom-fitted interior window treatments are designed to mount flush against existing window casings, reducing air gaps around glass panes. For property owners installing plantation shutters in Knoxville, TN, flush-mounted solid frames create a physical air barrier between the window glass and the room interior. The structural design features wide operable louvers that allow occupants to adjust incoming sunlight to manage natural interior lighting and maintain privacy from exterior view. The increased manufacturing footprint enables Shutter Masters to maintain a larger inventory of high-density natural wood species and moisture-resistant composite materials on site, allowing for more efficient processing of diverse material specifications.

The localized manufacturing process at Shutter Masters accommodates non-standard window geometries, including arches, eyebrow curves, and bay window configurations. Localized fabrication allows assembly personnel to inspect raw materials and verify frame measurements before delivery to job sites. Factory installation technicians secure each unit to ensure frame alignment during regular daily operation, and solid composite and wood louvers can be cleaned with a damp cloth for ongoing maintenance. By housing both the assembly machinery and technical installation staff within the same regional operation, the company maintains direct oversight over quality verification standards across all stages of production.

This operational enhancement also includes upgrades to precision cutting machinery and specialized joinery equipment, which support consistent tolerance levels across complex shutter assemblies. Regional property managers and residential builders often require tailored hardware options and custom paint finishes to match specific interior architectural guidelines. With expanded workshop capacity, Shutter Masters can fulfill these specialized coating and finishing requirements locally, avoiding extended third-party processing delays. The facility investment reflects broader regional demand for durable, built-to-order architectural fixtures that integrate directly into existing building structures.

Additionally, the facility expansion incorporates a dedicated workspace for the company's repair and maintenance operations. This dedicated area allows technicians to inspect, re-hinge, and service existing shutter assemblies brought in from regional client sites without interrupting the main custom fabrication line. The expanded layout also supports structured training programs for newly hired assembly workers and field installation specialists, ensuring that traditional woodworking techniques and modern measurement technologies are consistently applied across all project sites in the region.
