

Restoration Health Chiropractic Accepts School Supplies Donations with United Way of Central Arkansas

August 14, 2026

CONWAY, AR - August 14, 2026 -

Restoration Health Chiropractic is accepting school supplies donations in partnership with the United Way of Central Arkansas. The initiative supports children in and around Conway as they prepare for the school year.

The donation drive was announced on July 22nd. Items collected at the Conway location will assist students with essential materials needed for classroom readiness. The practice is collaborating with the United Way of Central Arkansas to direct contributions toward local youth.

Community participation forms the foundation of the effort. Individuals may contribute school supplies through the practice's Conway office. The partnership aims to address practical needs that help students begin the academic year with necessary tools.

Dr. Michael Butler, Owner and Chief Vision Officer at Restoration Health Chiropractic, said, "Supporting local children with school supplies aligns with our commitment to the Conway community and helps ensure students have the materials they need for a successful year."

Dr. Keith Beachy, Lead Doctor, said, "The partnership with the United Way of Central Arkansas allows the practice to contribute to the well-being of families in the area by facilitating access to basic educational resources."

Dr. Michael Butler is a native of Hope, Arkansas. He earned a bachelor's degree in nutrition from the University of Central Arkansas and his doctor of chiropractic degree from Life University. He received advanced training in Chiropractic Biophysics, Pediatrics and Maternal Care, and full spine techniques.

Dr. Keith Beachy is an Arkansas native from Fort Smith. The practice states that he is a board-certified chiropractor and certified functional medicine practitioner. He is also board certified in neuropathy and is working toward a Diplomate with the American Clinical Board for Nutrition. He completed a bachelor's degree in exercise science from the University of Arkansas and his doctor of chiropractic degree from Parker University.

Molly Butler, Owner and Chief Culture Officer, holds a degree in health promotion with a minor in business from Auburn University and contributes to the practice's community outreach efforts.

The practice's mission is to serve the community through neurologically-based corrective chiropractic care. Its vision centers on empowering individuals to make informed health decisions for their families. Community initiatives such as the school supplies drive extend this commitment beyond clinical services to practical support for local families.

Care at the Conway location continues alongside the donation effort. The facility provides a welcoming environment for both clinical visits and community contributions.

The school supplies collection reflects the practice's ongoing engagement with the Conway area. By partnering with the United Way of Central Arkansas, the initiative channels resources toward students who may face barriers to obtaining necessary materials.

The practice maintains a focus on community service while participating in local efforts that benefit families and children. Restoration Health Chiropractic continues to provide care grounded in its established processes for individuals seeking support related to spinal concerns.

The Conway location upholds standards of evaluation and care while facilitating the donation drive. Patient education materials and clinical protocols remain available, and the school supplies effort operates in parallel as a community service.

By combining clinical care with local partnerships, the practice supports individuals and families in multiple ways. The focus of the current initiative remains on collecting school supplies to help children in and around Conway prepare for the academic year.

Restoration Health Chiropractic operates with a commitment to community service through both clinical methods and collaborative projects. The partnership with the United Way of Central Arkansas extends access to educational resources while preserving core values of thorough evaluation and informed decision-making for patients and families.

The availability of the donation opportunity reflects the practice's emphasis on contributing to the well-being of the surrounding community. Educational content and clinical protocols continue alongside this collection effort.

The July 22nd announcement marks a specific opportunity for local residents to participate in supporting students. Contributions of school supplies will be directed through the established partnership to benefit children preparing for the school year.

The initiative underscores the practice's role in the Conway community beyond direct patient care. Team members participate in outreach that addresses practical needs for families and students in the area.

Restoration Health Chiropractic maintains its foundation in community-oriented service. The school supplies drive with the United Way of Central Arkansas provides a concrete way for residents to contribute to local educational readiness.
