

Oregon Derma Center Announces Physician-Led Aesthetic Services

August 21, 2026

MCMINNVILLE, OR - August 21, 2026 -

Oregon Derma Center, a naturopathic aesthetic medicine practice in McMinnville, Oregon, now offers physician-led cosmetic and regenerative treatments for residents of the Willamette Valley region. The practice, founded and operated by Dr. Jason Black, ND, a Board-Certified Naturopathic Physician, provides cosmetic injectables, laser therapeutics, RF microneedling, hormone therapy, and medical weight management from its location at 829 NE Highway 99W, Suite B.

Oregon Derma Center operates under a direct-physician model in which every treatment decision is made by Dr. Black rather than delegated to a technician or aesthetician. In many medical aesthetic practices, a physician sees patients at intake and then hands treatment execution to a licensed aesthetician or nurse injector. At Oregon Derma Center, Dr. Black performs the assessments, reads the anatomy, and administers or directly supervises each procedure. That structure changes the quality of treatment planning because the person who decides what to do and the person who does it are the same.

The practice uses named technology platforms including the Fotona 4D dual-wavelength laser system, which works across four separate tissue depths in a single session to address surface texture, skin laxity, and volume loss simultaneously. The Scarlet SRF radiofrequency microneedling system combines microneedling ? a process that creates controlled micro-channels in the skin to stimulate the skin's own repair response ? with radiofrequency energy that delivers heat to the deeper dermal layer, supporting collagen and elastin production without damaging the surface. Additional services include Agnes RF treatments for under-eye concerns, PDO thread lifts (which use dissolvable sutures to lift and reposition tissue), AquaFirme medical facials, laser hair removal, laser tattoo removal, and laser scar treatments.

The practice also provides services outside of traditional aesthetics. BioTE hormone pellet therapy addresses hormonal imbalances through small pellets inserted beneath the skin that release bioidentical hormones steadily over three to six months. Semaglutide-based medical weight management is supervised directly by Dr. Black and includes ongoing monitoring rather than a prescription-and-dismiss approach. PRP therapy for hair restoration uses the patient's own platelet-rich plasma, drawn from a blood sample and reintroduced at the scalp, to support hair follicle health. NightLase, a non-invasive laser treatment, works to reduce snoring by gently tightening the tissue at the back of the throat.

Dr. Black's naturopathic training shapes how the practice approaches every patient. Rather than addressing each cosmetic concern in isolation, he considers hormonal balance, inflammation, and overall wellness before recommending any treatment. Consultations begin with a full assessment of the patient's anatomy, health history, goals, and budget. No treatment is recommended until that assessment is complete, and every plan reflects the individual patient rather than a fixed menu. That approach means some patients leave with a different recommendation than they arrived expecting ? and often a better outcome because of it.

"My approach has always been to slow down, ask the right questions, and build a plan that fits the person sitting in front of me," said Dr. Jason Black, ND, Founder of Oregon Derma Center. "Every face is different. Every body is different. The treatments we recommend should reflect that, and the results should look like you on your best day, not like someone else."

Oregon Derma Center accepts new patients and does not require a referral to schedule an initial consultation. The practice is located at 829 NE Highway 99W, Suite B, and is open to patients throughout the Willamette Valley region.
