

Skin Elevé Announces Expanded Availability of Laser Hair Removal Services in Chatsworth and Surrounding Communities

August 18, 2026

CHATSWORTH, CA - August 18, 2026 -

Skin Elevé, a medical spa located in Chatsworth, California, has announced the expanded availability of its laser hair removal services for residents across additional communities it serves, including Simi Valley, Northridge, Porter Ranch, West Hills, Reseda, and Canoga Park. The announcement reflects the organization's continued efforts to provide access to medically supervised aesthetic treatments for individuals seeking long-term hair reduction solutions.

Laser hair removal has become one of the most widely performed non-surgical cosmetic procedures in the United States. As interest in low-maintenance grooming and aesthetic treatments continues to grow, many individuals are exploring alternatives to traditional methods such as shaving, waxing, and plucking. Skin Elevé's announcement aims to increase public awareness of the service and provide information about how the treatment works, who may benefit from it, and what clients can expect during the treatment process.

The procedure uses concentrated light energy to target hair follicles beneath the skin's surface. During treatment, the hair's pigment absorbs the laser energy, helping reduce future hair growth while leaving the surrounding skin largely unaffected. Multiple treatment sessions are typically recommended because hair grows in different cycles, and the laser is most effective during active growth phases.

According to aesthetic medicine professionals, laser hair removal is commonly used on areas including the legs, underarms, bikini line, back, chest, arms, and face. The procedure has become increasingly popular among both women and men seeking a longer-term approach to managing unwanted hair growth.

Skin Elev  reports that its laser hair removal services use advanced technology designed to accommodate a variety of skin tones and treatment areas. The medical spa uses equipment that incorporates skin analysis technology to help providers select appropriate treatment settings based on each individual's characteristics and treatment goals.

The expanded availability announcement comes as demand for non-invasive aesthetic procedures continues to rise throughout Southern California. Industry trends have shown sustained interest in treatments that require minimal downtime and allow individuals to return to normal activities shortly after their appointments.

Mary Bilbulyan, owner of Skin Elev , stated that the increased accessibility of laser hair removal services is intended to address growing interest from residents in neighboring communities.

“Laser hair removal continues to be one of the most requested aesthetic procedures among individuals seeking a longer-term approach to hair reduction,” said Mary Bilbulyan. “The expansion of service awareness into additional communities allows more residents to learn about the treatment process, consultation requirements, and available options for personalized care.”

Prior to treatment, clients typically undergo a consultation during which providers review medical history, evaluate skin and hair characteristics, and discuss treatment expectations. This assessment helps determine whether laser hair removal is appropriate for the individual and assists in developing a customized treatment plan.

Medical professionals note that outcomes can vary depending on factors such as hair color, skin tone, hormonal influences, and the area being treated. While many individuals experience a significant reduction in hair growth over time, maintenance sessions may be recommended to address future regrowth.

Laser hair removal has evolved considerably over the past two decades as technological advancements have improved treatment precision and expanded the range of skin types that can be treated safely. Modern systems incorporate cooling mechanisms and advanced calibration features that support patient comfort throughout the procedure.

The treatment is often chosen by individuals seeking to reduce the time and expense of repetitive hair removal methods. In addition to convenience, some clients pursue laser hair removal to address concerns related to ingrown hairs or skin irritation that can result from shaving and waxing.

Skin Elevé emphasized that patient education remains an important component of the treatment process. During consultations, providers discuss pre-treatment preparation, expected treatment timelines, post-procedure care, and factors that may influence treatment outcomes. This information enables individuals to make informed decisions regarding their aesthetic care.

The medical spa noted that laser hair removal frequently complements broader skincare and aesthetic treatment plans. Some clients combine hair removal procedures with facials, skin rejuvenation services, or other non-invasive treatments based on their personal goals and provider recommendations.

As awareness of aesthetic medicine continues to expand, healthcare professionals increasingly emphasize the importance of receiving cosmetic procedures in clinically supervised environments. Proper consultation, treatment planning, and adherence to safety protocols remain central considerations in delivering laser-based services.

The expanded service announcement aligns with broader industry trends toward personalized aesthetic care. Rather than applying a single treatment approach to all clients, providers increasingly tailor procedures based on individual needs, treatment areas, and desired outcomes.

Skin Elevé serves clients from across the western San Fernando Valley region and neighboring communities. The organization offers a variety of aesthetic services, including laser treatments, facials, microneedling, injectable procedures, hair restoration therapies, and skin rejuvenation treatments. Services are provided by trained professionals in a medical spa environment, with a focus on individualized treatment planning and patient education.

The company stated that consultations for laser hair removal services are available for residents of Chatsworth, Simi Valley, Northridge, Porter Ranch, West Hills, Reseda, Canoga Park, and surrounding areas.
