

Smooth Rollin' Sealcoating And Paving LLC Highlights Asphalt Sealcoating as Portland Property Owners Look to Extend Pavement Life

August 19, 2026

GRESHAM, OR - August 19, 2026 -

Smooth Rollin' Sealcoating And Paving LLC asphalt sealcoating services are drawing renewed attention as property owners across the greater Portland region look for practical ways to extend the life of driveways, parking lots, and roadways heading into the wetter months. The Latino-owned asphalt contractor is emphasizing preventative pavement maintenance ahead of the Pacific Northwest's rainy season.

With regional weather subjecting asphalt surfaces to frequent rainfall, standing water, and seasonal temperature swings, untreated pavement is prone to cracking, oxidation, and eventual structural failure. The company reports that many of the deterioration problems it encounters could have been slowed or avoided through routine maintenance rather than reconstruction.

Sealcoating serves as a protective barrier that shields pavement from ultraviolet rays, water penetration, oil spills, and oxidation. When applied on a regular schedule and paired with crack sealing, the treatment helps prevent water from reaching the base layers of a surface, where freeze and thaw cycles can accelerate damage. The company notes that addressing small cracks early is less disruptive and less expensive than resurfacing an entire lot.

Ricardo Pena of Smooth Rollin' Sealcoating and Paving said the timing reflects a growing awareness among commercial and residential property owners about the long-term cost of neglecting pavement.

"Many people wait until potholes and large cracks appear before they think about their asphalt, and by then the repairs are much more involved," Pena said. "Sealcoating and crack sealing are straightforward steps that protect an existing investment and give a surface years of additional service life."

The company notes that preventative maintenance carries added importance for parking lots and commercial properties, where pavement condition affects safety, accessibility, and liability. Faded striping, uneven surfaces, and drainage problems can create hazards for both drivers and pedestrians. Beyond sealcoating, the company provides asphalt paving and repairs, parking lot striping and markings, and speed bump and safety installations, including wheel stops and signage that support ADA compliance.

Pena added that clear communication remains central to how the company approaches each project.

"Property owners deserve honest pricing and a clear explanation of what their pavement actually needs," Pena said. "The goal is to complete careful work and then walk the site with the client to confirm the results meet expectations."

The company follows a process that begins with a free estimate, continues through completion of the work, and concludes with a final walkthrough. All workmanship is backed by a one-year warranty.
