Advanced Injury Care Clinic has introduced a coordinated care pathway that helps auto accident victims in Nashville access immediate treatment while connecting them with personal injury attorneys who can help ensure that treatment is covered at no out-of-pocket cost to the patient. The program addresses a persistent challenge for individuals recovering from vehicular collisions: obtaining timely clinical care while navigating the financial and legal complexities that often follow an accident.

Through the initiative, patients receive Help after an auto accident in Nashville by first accessing clinical evaluation and treatment and, when appropriate, referrals to personal injury attorneys familiar with the documentation and insurance requirements tied to accident recovery. This coordination is designed to allow patients to begin treatment without delay and without immediate financial concern.

The clinical team focuses on the soft tissue damage that often goes undetected in standard medical imaging, using hands-on evaluation techniques that assess posture, spinal alignment, and soft tissue function. This assessment methodology allows the team to develop individualized treatment plans tailored to each patient's specific injury pattern and recovery goals.

The clinic has aligned this care pathway with the opening of its newest facility. The New Downtown Nashville Chiropractic Clinic, located at 2214 Elliston Place, is positioned to serve auto accident victims and personal injury patients within the city's central business district. The location was selected to reduce travel for individuals seeking evaluation and care following a collision.

Dr. Darneshia Roberts DC, lead chiropractor at Advanced Injury Care Clinic, noted that the timing of care plays a significant role in patient outcomes. "Delays in treatment following an accident can affect both physical recovery and the ability to properly document injuries for insurance purposes," said Dr. Roberts. "The goal is to get accident victims evaluated and into care quickly, without adding unnecessary travel or delay to an already stressful situation."

Dr. Roberts also addressed the coordinated support the clinic provides beyond clinical treatment. "Many people are unaware that they may be able to receive the care they need without paying out of pocket," she said. "By coordinating with personal injury attorneys when appropriate, the clinical team helps patients focus on recovery rather than financial concerns."

The care pathway applies across the clinic's Nashville locations, including the downtown facility, which operates with extended hours and flexible scheduling. Treatment rooms are equipped with diagnostic and therapeutic equipment intended for trauma-related injury care. In addition to auto accident injuries, the clinic treats work-related injuries, slip and fall incidents, and chronic pain conditions resulting from trauma, and it provides detailed documentation to support workers' compensation claims and employer requirements.

The initiative reflects a broader effort to make injury care more accessible across the Nashville metropolitan area. The organization maintains a multidisciplinary approach, incorporating both chiropractic and medical professionals to support patient recovery.

Advanced Injury Care Clinic is a Nashville-based chiropractic practice specializing in the treatment of injuries related to auto accidents and other personal injuries. Founded and led by Dr. Darneshia Roberts DC, the clinic has more than a decade of experience treating car accident victims in Tennessee. Services include treatment for whiplash, neck pain, back pain, work injuries, and slip and fall injuries. The clinic combines chiropractic techniques with patient support services and operates multiple locations throughout Nashville.
