Quality Water Treatment Expands Authorized WaterDrop Filter Collection for Point-of-Use Filtration

August 24, 2026

Box Elder, South Dakota - August 24, 2026 -
Most tap water carries a mix of minerals, metals, and residual treatment chemicals that together make up its total dissolved solids, or TDS, reading. While not all TDS is harmful, a measurement in the range of zero to 50 parts per million is generally regarded as the benchmark for very clean drinking water. That standard has prompted a growing number of households to consider point-of-use options such as reverse osmosis rather than relying on whole-house treatment alone. Quality Water Treatment now serves as an authorized dealer for the WaterDrop Water Filter collection, helping homeowners navigate that choice with genuine parts and consultation.

The lineup available through Quality Water Treatment spans several reverse osmosis tiers. The G2 series offers compact tankless filtration suited to smaller households, while the G3 series functions as a higher-capacity tankless option featuring a smart faucet and a TDS display. Recent additions include the WaterDrop T3-M 450G Remineralization RO system and the T4-A 450GPD Alkaline Dual Flow RO system, both of which add mineral-reintroduction stages after filtration for households that prefer minerals returned to their water.

For those seeking simpler point-of-use filtration without reverse osmosis, the collection also includes a five-stage Under Sink Direct Connect Filtration System and an Under Sink Integrated Dual Carbon Filtration System. To support ongoing maintenance, replacement filter cartridges for the G2 and G3 series remain readily available. As an authorized WaterDrop dealer, Quality Water Treatment supplies genuine components, a distinction from many third-party marketplace listings.

"Choosing between reverse osmosis and under-sink filtration depends heavily on a household's specific water profile, not on a single retail recommendation," said a representative for Quality Water Treatment. "The goal is to match the right WaterDrop Filter to the water a family actually has, then support that system over time with genuine replacement parts."

To assist that decision, the company operates a free water analysis and sizing tool it calls the Water Intelligence Engine, which generates recommendations based on a household's individual water characteristics. That resource reflects a consultation-focused approach the company has maintained since its founding.

"A family-owned company that has worked in water treatment for more than three decades tends to think in terms of long-term fit," the representative added. "Consultation before and after a purchase matters as much as the equipment itself, and the range of WaterDrop Filters allows for genuinely different solutions rather than one-size-fits-all answers."

Quality Water Treatment, also known as QWT, is a family-owned water treatment company operating since 1990. The company provides water softeners, filtration systems, generators, and ionizers for both city and well water sources, representing brands that include SoftPro, Fleck by Pentair, and WaterDrop. Its offerings cover residential and commercial water softeners, whole-home filtration, structured water products, and alkaline water ionizers, alongside point-of-use systems for households addressing specific water quality concerns.
