Wanderlust, a business in Burlingame, CA, is proud to announce that they have released high quality compression socks specifically designed for women. These women's compression socks have a number of specific features that ensure they are comfortable and provide protection for women during travel and maternity. They are also proving to be popular with nurses.

A representative from Team Wanderlust says: "We have designed medical grade compression socks specifically for women. They fit perfectly as they are customized for women, offer maximum swelling reduction, highest pain relief, and long lasting durability. Compression socks are never the most elegant of clothing items, but we guarantee that women will love these. In fact, if they don't, we offer a full refund or will send our clients a new pair for free."

The socks offer medical grade graduated compression. This means they offer 28 to 33 mmHg at the ankle, 19 to 23 mmHg at the middle of the leg, and 12 to 16 mmHg at the bottom of the knee. This is the ideal amount of moderate compression that enables women to wear them comfortably without feeling as if they are too tight. They can be used for varicose veins, edema, DVT, cramping, extensive standing or sitting, and working for long periods of time.

What really sets these compression socks apart is that they have been customized specifically for the female anatomy. "We wanted to make sure our compression socks provide a perfect, comfortable fit," adds the company representative. "The adjustable cuffs make sure that the length is just perfect, which stops the calf from constriction and doesn't cut into the back of the knee. The socks have a special weave design and heel compartment, which makes sure that the stockings won't bunch or roll down your legs. We offer the socks in a range of shoe sizes, which means they are suitable for 90% of the female population."

The socks come with cutting edge comfort features, including a seamless toe box that stops skin on skin friction. As such, there is no risk of developing corns or blisters, nor will the socks leave imprints or deep red marks. Built with durability in mind, the socks are already proving to be very popular.
