August 28, 2026 -

Fremont Family Dentistry has announced an expansion of its dental care offerings with the addition of tooth extraction services for patients in Fremont, Nebraska. The service expansion is intended to address growing local demand for treatment related to severe decay, infection, dental crowding, and other conditions that may require removal of a tooth.

Dr. Sarah Mitchell, lead dentist at Fremont Family Dentistry, said the expanded service reflects changing oral health needs within the community. By providing tooth extraction services in Fremont, NE, locally, the practice aims to give area residents another option for addressing dental problems that may require timely intervention.

"We have seen more patients presenting with conditions where extraction may be necessary to protect their overall oral health," said Dr. Mitchell. "Our goal is to help patients understand why an extraction may be recommended, what the procedure involves, and what they can expect during recovery."

The announcement comes as dental professionals continue to emphasize the importance of addressing advanced decay, infection, damaged teeth, and crowding before these conditions contribute to additional oral health complications. Tooth extraction may be recommended when a tooth cannot reasonably be restored or when removing it supports another course of treatment.

Fremont Family Dentistry has incorporated updated dental technology and treatment protocols into the extraction process. The practice reports that these measures are intended to support accurate treatment planning, patient comfort, and appropriate post-procedure care while allowing patients to receive treatment closer to home.

The expansion also adds tooth extraction to the practice's existing range of preventive, restorative, and general dental services. According to the practice, treatment recommendations are made following an examination and evaluation of each patient's individual dental condition rather than through a one-size-fits-all approach.

Dr. Mitchell and the dental team are also placing additional emphasis on patient education surrounding extractions. Patients may be advised to consider an extraction when they experience persistent dental pain, significant tooth damage, advanced infection, severe decay, or certain forms of overcrowding that cannot be effectively addressed through other treatment options.

As part of this educational effort, Fremont Family Dentistry plans to provide information about the potential consequences of leaving certain dental conditions untreated. In some cases, delaying treatment for an infected or severely damaged tooth may allow discomfort or infection to worsen and potentially affect surrounding teeth and tissues.

The practice is also developing informational resources intended to explain the extraction process and the steps patients can take before and after treatment. These materials will address topics such as oral hygiene, recovery expectations, follow-up care, and situations in which patients should contact a dental professional after a procedure.

Community education will remain a component of the service expansion. Fremont Family Dentistry plans to share educational materials and provide opportunities for patients to learn more about circumstances that may lead to extraction as well as alternative treatment options when they are clinically appropriate.

The introduction of tooth extraction Fremont, NE services reflects Fremont Family Dentistry's broader effort to respond to evolving dental needs in the area. The practice says the expanded treatment availability is designed to make necessary dental procedures more accessible while continuing to emphasize informed treatment decisions and individualized care.

Fremont Family Dentistry will continue providing preventive and restorative dental services alongside its expanded extraction offerings. Patients experiencing significant dental pain, infection, tooth damage, or other concerning symptoms are encouraged to seek a professional dental evaluation to determine the appropriate course of treatment.
