August 31, 2026

CHICAGO, IL - August 31, 2026 -

SDZ Law, LLC has confirmed that attorney Sarah Dorigan Zigulich is resuming active family-law practice, marking a new professional chapter for the founding principal of the Chicago-area firm. After stepping back from full-time practice to focus on raising her children, Zigulich is returning to serve individuals and families throughout the Chicago area now that her children have reached school age.

Zigulich's return was recently reported by WBOC and covered through aggregation platforms including Ground News, which categorized the coverage as center perspective. Her renewed practice focuses on the areas that have defined her career, including divorce, child custody, parenting time, child and spousal support, mediation, marital agreements, and complex financial matters.

Zigulich describes her years focused on motherhood as a period that deepened her understanding of the challenges families encounter during major life transitions.

"Raising my children gave me a firsthand understanding of the emotional and practical realities families face when their circumstances change," said Sarah Dorigan Zigulich, founding principal of SDZ Law, LLC. "That perspective informs how I approach each matter, from custody arrangements to financial questions, with attention to both the legal issues and the human ones behind them."

Her practice emphasizes a detail-oriented approach that prioritizes educating clients throughout the process. Zigulich works to help clients understand their options and the implications of each decision, aiming for resolutions rather than unnecessary conflict.

"Family-law matters are among the most personal issues a person can face," Zigulich added. "My goal is to help clients make informed choices and to find solutions that address their families and their futures, whether that means reaching agreement through mediation or advocating through litigation when necessary."

During her time away from full-time practice, Zigulich remained connected to the legal community, contributing writing to the Illinois State Bar Association. Her ISBA article on the proper use of preferred gender pronouns examined the intersection of language, inclusivity, and legal writing, reflecting her attention to how legal communication affects the people it serves.

SDZ Law, LLC concentrates on matrimonial and family law with an approach designed to humanize a process that clients often find stressful and uncertain. The firm assists couples in negotiating premarital agreements that set out the financial and property rights of each party, and it represents clients in resolving parenting disputes involving custody, visitation, and decision-making responsibilities. The firm also litigates child support matters, working to establish, modify, or enforce support orders in a manner that reflects both the needs of the child and the circumstances of the client.

In addition, SDZ Law, LLC handles cases involving individuals facing false allegations in family-law disputes, including accusations of abuse, neglect, or other misconduct, working to protect clients' rights and reputations. The firm provides resources and information on family-law topics for those navigating these transitions.

Zigulich's return reflects a continued focus on serving Chicago-area families with a practice grounded in both legal experience and personal understanding of the transitions her clients face.
