August 31, 2026 -

Petrizzo & Longo Attorneys At Law has announced an expansion of its personal injury legal services in Middletown, NY, and surrounding communities. The expansion includes legal assistance for individuals involved in personal injury matters, along with educational resources covering issues related to personal injury law in New York.

As injury lawyers in Middletown, NY, Petrizzo & Longo Attorneys At Law handles personal injury cases involving circumstances such as automobile accidents, workplace injuries, and medical malpractice. The firm reviews the circumstances of each matter to determine the legal issues involved and the appropriate course of action.

Personal injury cases can involve several considerations, including medical expenses, lost wages, insurance claims, liability, and potential damages. Depending on the circumstances, a case may proceed through negotiations, an insurance claim, or litigation. The firm's legal services address these aspects of personal injury matters and the procedures that may apply under New York law.

Founding partners John Petrizzo and Mary Longo have emphasized the importance of clear communication during legal proceedings. Personal injury cases can require individuals to navigate unfamiliar legal terminology, documentation requirements, negotiations, and court procedures. The firm's approach includes explaining the applicable legal process and discussing the issues relevant to each case.

The firm has also launched a blog covering personal injury law and related legal subjects. The blog includes information intended to help readers become more familiar with personal injury claims, legal terminology, and developments in New York law. Topics address questions that may arise following an accident or injury and provide general information about the legal considerations involved in these matters.

The educational resource covers a range of personal injury topics, including changes in New York law, common questions about personal injury claims, and general information about legal proceedings. The content is intended as a source of general legal information rather than case-specific legal advice from injury lawyers in Middletown, NY.

In addition to its legal services and educational materials, Petrizzo & Longo Attorneys At Law has participated in forums and community discussions concerning developments in New York personal injury law. These discussions have addressed changes in the legal landscape and issues that may affect residents dealing with personal injury matters.

The firm's expanded services include case evaluations, legal planning, and representation during the claims process. An evaluation may involve reviewing the circumstances surrounding an injury, available records and documentation, applicable legal issues, and other information relevant to the matter. The specific steps involved can vary depending on the facts and circumstances of each case.

Personal injury claims may raise questions about who may be legally responsible for an injury, whether insurance coverage applies, and what types of damages may be available. The legal process can also involve deadlines, negotiations with insurance companies, discovery, and court proceedings. Petrizzo & Longo Attorneys At Law handles these legal matters as part of its personal injury practice.

The service expansion adds to the firm's existing legal work in the Middletown area while providing additional information about personal injury law through its blog. The combination of legal services and educational content addresses both the procedural and informational aspects of personal injury matters.

The firm's personal injury practice continues to include representation in cases involving automobile accidents, workplace injuries, medical malpractice, and other circumstances that may result in a personal injury claim. Its legal team works with clients to review the facts of their cases, discuss applicable legal considerations, and determine how the matter may proceed.

With the addition of expanded personal injury services and an educational blog, Petrizzo & Longo Attorneys At Law continues its personal injury practice in the Middletown community. The firm remains available to handle personal injury matters and provide information concerning legal procedures and developments affecting these cases in New York.
