PureAlchemy Design, a business in Minneapolis, MN, is proud to announce that a number of their designs have won prestigious awards. The company is known for its distinctive approach to workplace design and commercial interior design. Their focus on reuse and upcycle has been particularly recognized, leading to the various awards.

Stephany Eaton, founder of PureAlchemy Design, says: "Our focus is on creating unique, productive, and beautiful spaces, while working sustainably by reusing and repurposing what we find in the space. To have this vision recognized with various awards is something that I am incredibly proud of."

PureAlchemy Design designed the Prestige Office including the unique Veranda, as well as their expressive reception area. This design was awarded 'Hippest Spot' in North Loop, Minneapolis. Furthermore, the company designed the Gallery Showroom River of Goods. This was awarded the 'Minnesota Brownfields Economic Development Impact Award'. In addition, they designed the reception area for SeaChange, for which they earned a place in the NKBA 'Best Use of Artisan Material'. For the same building's collaboration area, they ended up in first place in the ASID 'Corporate Commercial-Offices'.

Stephany Eaton is a woman with a vision. A Boston Architectural College graduate, she focuses on retail, commercial, and workplace design. She is an expert in project management, creating branded environments. What really sets her apart, however, is her focus on sustainability. In fact, she obtained a Graduate Certificate in Sustainable Design. She cares about arts and culture, the environment, health, and science and technology. This caring attitude is reflected throughout her work.

"My goal is to create spaces in which people can work comfortably, increasing productivity and also collaboration," adds Stephany. "It is about creating beautiful spaces with vibrant color palettes in which people feel good about what they do and about themselves. Sustainability is a big part of that, not just because it is good for the environment and the health of those that occupy the space. But, also because it means that spaces become completely unique."

People are encouraged to contact Stephany and her PureAlchemy Design team to discuss their space requirements, or to view the portfolio of work that have already been completed.
